A gay San Francisco art student remains in critical but stable condition at a local hospital after he was shot in the chest on Friday, October 28 by an assailant who confronted him about walking down Waller Street holding hands with his boyfriend.

A $10,000 reward has been offered by Mayor Frank Jordan for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the suspects in the case, which police

Castro Halloween Turns Scary

by Kent Brandley

Halloween in the Castro turned into something of a minor nightmare this year, causing volunteer organizers and officials to analyze what went wrong and what can be done in the future to correct it.

Lester Olmstead-Rose, executive director of Community United Against Violence (CUAV), which was given responsibility to provide safety monitors for the event, admitted, "There was not adequate volunteer safety monitoring last night." He told the Bay Area Reporter the organization was investigating the reasons for that.

But at the same time, Olmstead-Rose observed that the Halloween celebration had changed radically in recent years and said, "It no longer feels like the gay community having a fun day."

Police agreed with CUAV that it was not the regular Castro gay community causing the problem, but what police called "Looky Lous" and CUAV called "gawkers."

A crowd estimated at roughly 300,000 by police and organizers created wall-to-wall people jamming the Castro district Monday night.

San Francisco Police Captain Joaquin Santos, commander of Mission Street Station, reported one gunshot wound to an unidentified victim's leg in the vicinity of 19th and Castro. Reports on that incident were not complete at press time.

Santos said 55 people were arrested, 28 detained and released, 25 taken into custody. Santos reported three felony arrests, nine drug-related arrests, three warrant arrests, and various dangerous weapons seized.

One man, identified by Santos as Michael Mauricio, 19, of Oakley, California, was arrested with a fully-loaded .357 magnum with 12 extra rounds and a speed loader, Santos told the B.A.R. He

B.A.R. ENDORSEMENTS

America is often called the land of plenty – and, rightly, a place where plenty is wasted.

Of everything we waste in this country, no commodity is more valuable than our votes; men and women have fought and died to gain and/or withhold the right to participate in democracy, and wasting it now is the height of irresponsibility and dishonor.

Although we hear a lot about sending messages at the ballot box, that's really the function of a telephone or letter. If you want to send politicians messages, by all means, write them and give them your opinion. Vote, on the other hand, to survive. To build a world in which you can live. To save your own ass, when that's what's at stake.

Nowhere is it more at stake for the lesbian and gay community this year than with State Proposition 186, the universal healthcare initiative. Vote to end a system in which the privilege to live through illness is mostly reserved for the rich. That vote is much more than a mere message, it's self-preservation. And although some extremely well-heeled gays like David Mixner may say it's flawed, we have a different perspective: we're printing 20 obituaries in this issue of the B.A.R. If Mixner or anyone else believes Prop 186 is unnecessary, we urge them to take a look at pages 26 and 27 and tell us why so many of those people were forced into poverty before they died, as if it were a natural by-product of a viral infection. Let him take his blood money from the insurance companies and shuffle through the world explaining to his friends how his comfort is so much more important than their survival. He is no friend, and his message is poison. Vote for Prop 186 while you have the chance.

For the sake of brevity, here are some of the positions endorsed by the Bay Area Reporter:

Yes on State Props: 181, 183, 186, 190, and 191

SFSU's Gay Health Fair For Better Than Fair Health

by Kent Brandley

Next Thursday, November 10, San Francisco State University will hold its first free health fair focusing on needs of the queer communities.

SFSU's "Pride Celebration," open to all, will emphasize information on health issues, and resources important to the gay, lesbian, and bisexual communities, said Ted DeAdwyler of the SFSU news bureau.

The event will run from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in Jack Adams Hall of the Cesar Chavez Student Center on the SFSU campus, located at 1600 Holloway Avenue in the city, DeAdwyler said.

Free food samples, blood pressure screening, dental screening, coupons for free cholesterol screening by subsequent appointment, and theatrical performances will also be part of the Pride Celebration, sponsored by San Francisco State's Student Health Service, DeAdwyler said.

Representatives from many local organizations that serve gays, lesbians, and bisexuals will be on hand at the health fair to provide information on health issues, the arts, nutrition, legal matters and holistic health, DeAdwyler added.

Kamal Harb, an openly gay health educator with SFSU's department of preventive medicine, will coordinate the health/resource fair.

Harb, who has a master's degree from San Jose State, came to SFSU a year and a half ago. He told the Bay Area Reporter he saw a need — particularly among people new to the city — to become familiar with the many available health resources here, including recreational facilities. Many new arrivals are not aware of the vast array of available health resources geared to address HIV/AIDS, as well as alcohol and other drug programs.

Harb said he wants to "reach out to all different diverse groups on campus." With this in mind, more than 30 different organizations will participate in the health fair. They include: Community United Against Violence; the Immune Enhancement Project; the San Francisco Hiking Club; University of California on Deafness; the AIDS Referral Panel; Eighteenth Street Services; Project Open Hand; and many others.

In addition to major health issues, the arts, nutrition, legal matters, and holistic health will be represented at the fair, DeAdwyler said.

Theatrical performances will help live up the Pride Celebration and some of the "fun activities" will be provided by GELAA, a Latino/Latina gay lesbian, bisexual group. ▼

Who Wants More Chicken in the Castro?

by Dennis Conkin

Construction is set to begin Tuesday, November 15 to turn the former Church Street Station restaurant, located at the corner of Church and Market streets, into a Boston Chicken outlet.

The restaurant will be oriented toward deli-style whole meal items, including the company's spit-roasted chicken specialty, vegetables, salads, and side dishes. Initial plans call for seating for 52 patrons.

Plans are for the restaurant to be open from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Between 40 and 60 people from the immediate neighborhood will be hired to staff the site, according to the company.

Boston Chicken will spend an estimated $1.2 million to bring the existing building up to code and standards necessary for operation, according to company spokesperson Susan Wilson.

The renovation includes seismic upgrades, roof replacement, and repaving and lighting of the 13-space parking lot at the site.

Wilson also said that security concerns about the street denizens who loiter and pan-handle at the adjacent Church Street MUNI Station would be addressed by the renovation of the site.

"The scope of the restaurant is such that we do not believe that we will continue to have a safety problem or an issue with the transient population," Wilson said.

The restaurant is scheduled to open December 15.

The location had been under consideration as a proposed site for a lesbian and gay community center, without the knowledge that a long term lease had been signed.

Boston Chicken currently has 319 restaurants around the country, and the Church Street franchise owners want to make sure that the company is not perceived as just another fast food franchise chain moving into a community, Wilson said.

"They are looking for the opportunity to tell people what they are doing, and have expressed concern that when the lesbian and gay community takes a look, they will only see a chain," Wilson said.

Wilson said the franchise would be a "good neighbor" that will support local charities and non-profit groups that serve human needs. ▼

Jordan Proclaims 'Tavern Guild Foundation Community Thrift Store Day' CTS Passes Out $78K in Funding

by Kent Brandley

Proving that one person's junk is still another person's treasure, and emphasizing that volunteers play a vital role in gay and lesbian benevolence, the San Francisco Tavern Guild Foundation presented 164 checks totaling more than $78,000 at its 14th birthday bash last Wednesday, October 26.

George Banda, foundation board chairman, said profits from the thrift store will provide Bay Area non-profit organizations with a quarter of a million dollars this year alone, after overhead and building payments.

Banda, in his fourth year as chairman, said the foundation decided to buy the buildings housing the thrift store - located at 17th and Valencia - a year ago. The purchase price, he disclosed, was "close to a million."

"We bought the building and will soon have it paid for," Banda said in his remarks to an anniversary audience of roughly 200 people.

He pointed out recent improvements and said more were on the way, including new interior lighting.

Banda, who owned various gay bars in the past, operated Club Dori on Presidio Avenue for 25 years and Jacksons at Bay and Powell for about 15 years.

Banda credited Don Mieson with the idea of starting the highly successful Community Thrift Store - and Larry Littlejohn with raising the $5,000 in working capital that got the operation underway. "Without him it wouldn't have happened. Five thousand bucks 15 years ago was a lot of bucks," he said.

Certificates and plaques from Mayor Frank Jordan honored about 40 volunteers and 15 dedicated store employees, and proclaimed October 26 as Tavern Guild Foundation Community Thrift Store Day in the city.

Speakers praised a host of helpers and gave special credit to fundraiser and grant writer Kevin Murphy, and to Stanley Boyd, a veteran volunteer who has been exceptionally helpful.

The AIDS Emergency Fund received the largest check from thrift store profits. Banda presented AEF with $8,335.08. Other large checks went to Project Open Hand/Trinity Church: $7,790; the San Francisco AIDS Foundation: $3,811; Shanti Project: $3,877; Casa de Las Madres: $3,504; and Godfather Service Fund: $2,039.

Checks exceeding $1,000 each also went to AIDS Community Network, Women's Cancer Resource Center, Friends of the Sharon Art Studio, Planned Parenthood, Hartford Zen Center/Maitri AIDS Hospice, Larkin Street Youth Center, Hamilton Family Center, Buen Dia Family School, Sappho's Residence for Women, Coming Home Hospice, and the AIDS/HIV Life Center. ▼

"Prop. O doesn't require nor guarantee that any new tax money be used to improve service or make buses safer or cleaner. Nor does it address waste and inefficiency at MUNI. Vote NO on Prop. O. We need to go back to the drawing board with all sectors of our community to produce a better MUNI.""

"Proposition O explicitly prohibits the use of any assessment revenues for the construction of transit system improvements or the acquisition of new transit equipment. "San Franciscans agree that the Municipal Railway needs radical reform. But Proposition O won't reform MUNI.

I chaired a 55-member committee which won voter approval in 1989 for a half-cent sales tax increase to finance a $3 billion transportation improvement plan. We were successful because we had carefully drafted plans. Prop. O contains no such plans.

EDITORIAL

We Can Make a Difference

Although she has run a lackluster campaign, there is compelling reason to vote for Kathleen Brown, even independently of the desire to give Governor Pete Wilson the boot for his many transgressions. The reason: all the judges who are running for re-election this year are, not surprisingly, Wilson and Deukmejian appointees; it is up to the governor to appoint the judges who decide for the rest of us what is True and Fair. That is not a responsibility we think belongs in the hands of the Republicans right now, particularly when we see that Fairness and Truth are shifting ideals to Wilson, defined by the wishes of Republican policymakers and not by empirical evidence or compassion.

We are very angry at the Republicans for their arrogance and forgetfulness — they pretend that Reaganomics was good for a country that was very nearly destroyed by supply-side economics, a country now teeming with what is now called “the homeless” and what used to be called “the lower middle class” — and most of all, for their intolerance and greed.

Three races this year are built upon greed and the concept that it is perfectly fine to buy elections — even more than usual, we mean — and we suspect their outcome will be a harbinger of things to come: if Senatorial contender

Michael Huffington, Insurance Commissioner hopeful Chuck Quackenbush, and the Tobacco Industry-sponsored Prop 188 win, we fear the pattern will only get worse in the future. Huffington has spent some $27.3 million (as of press time, including $2.5 million in the last week alone); Quackenbush has received $2 million from the industry he hopes to “regulate,” nearly half of that in the past three weeks; and Joe Camel has been so badly hurt by anti-smoking laws he has decided to bankroll his own.

These are, we think, dangerous precedents and we believe it is vital that all three be soundly defeated.

Huffington is particularly disturbing. The only thing worse than a politician who disagrees with his constituents is one who won't say how he feels. Virtually the only thing he does say he stands for is Prop 187, the intolerant anti-immigrant ballot measure — (we urge you to vote against it; remember Pastor Niemuehr's famous “first they came for the communists...” quote) — and his actions conclusively show he doesn't believe he is personally bound by it.

People who don't believe laws apply to them, at least those who are not Congressmen, are called “sociopaths.”

(We aren't professionals, and we don't pretend that is an accurate diagnosis of Huffington. It is, however, a statement of fact.) If Huff doesn't believe laws are for him now, what will he think when he has successfully made an end-run around normal political procedures and bought himself an election? It's terrifying to think about.

Dianne Feinstein, on the other hand, is a powerful and effective voice in Washington, and we cannot imagine the same ever being said about Huffington. Like all heterosexuals, she is a frequently infuriating friend, but our impatience with her occasional conservatism is as nothing compared with how fundamentalists feel about her usual liberalism. Until we finally send a gay or lesbian person to the Senate, we can't ask for more than a candidate who gets (as Feinstein does) an approval rating from Pat Robertson of less than ten percent.

Dianne Feinstein

Feinstein voted against the ban of HIV-positive immigrants, one of only 23 senators to do so; against the ban on gay and lesbian servicemembers, one of only 33; for condom distribution without required parental consent; for the NEA; against school prayer; and so on. She also provided the necessary vote to pass Clinton's budget, which Huffington certainly would not have done.

Dianne Feinstein must be returned to Washington, and it may be up to the gay and lesbian community to make that difference. All of America probably won't line up to thank us afterwards, but they should. After all, most of America won't even line up to vote.

The gay and lesbian community is different. We take our citizenship seriously. For better or worse, we have to. ▼

VOTE NO.
Increased Sentences for Repeat Offenders

This proposition reaffirms already existing laws concerning repeat offenders. In a state with already overcrowded and inhumane prisons, this only exacerbates the failing criminal justice system. We say rewrite existing laws to make them more humane. Let's not go back to the Dark Ages. Vote no on Prop. 184.

PROPOSITION 185
VOTE NO.
Public Transportation Trust Funds, Gas Tax Increase

We endorsed Prop. 181 to help fund viable alternatives to the automobile. We don't need another political agency to piss away millions of additional tax dollars. Another tax of this nature is not what the citizens of California need at this time. Vote no on Prop. 185.

PROPOSITION 186
VOTE YES.
Health Services Taxes

Check out who is fighting this initiative: the health insurance industry and other medical-related businesses, including doctors' groups. This would be a major step in health insurance for all Californians. How many of us have watched people's savings and homes being eaten up by medical and prescription bills? It may not be perfect, but it is a step in the right direction. We strongly urge a yes on Prop. 186.

PROPOSITION 187
VOTE NO.
Illegal Aliens Public Services Etc.

Probably the most racist and bigoted measure ever to get on the California ballot. It won't solve any problems and would cost the state's taxpayers untold billions of dollars due to the fact that many billions of Federal funds would be withdrawn. Vote no on Prop. 187.

PROPOSITION 188
VOTE NO.
Smoking and Tobacco Products, Local Preemption, State Regulation

The tobacco companies have unabashedly spent millions of dollars on this initiative to toss out all the local smoking laws and replace them with their own state laws, which are not as restrictive as most current local laws. Don't be fooled. Vote no on Prop. 188.

PROPOSITION 189
VOTE NO.
Bail Exception— Felony Sexual Assault

This is an unnecessary law. Judges already have the right to deny bail to violent felons. Unless the accused is a flight risk or has threatened someone, bail should be available. This law was placed on the ballot to make some of our legislators say they have done something to get tough on crime. Don't be fooled. This is still America, where you are still innocent until proven guilty. Vote no on Prop. 189.

PROPOSITION 190
VOTE YES.
Commission on Judicial Performance

Transfers disciplinary authority over judges from the State Supreme Court to a commission from the public. All hearings would be open to the public. A commission we should have had years ago. The time has come for this overhaul. Vote yes on Prop. 190.

Early Intervention

Thank you for placing a public service announcement in the Bay Area Reporter regarding our educational program on HIV and Nutrition, the first of a quarterly series of educational programs sponsored by the Haight Ashbury Free Medical Clinic's HIV Early Intervention Program. Thanks to the good publicity we received, the event was well-attended and considered a success.

Beware Anti-186 Efforts

Concerned people of our community, beware. In its desperate effort to defeat Proposition 186, the Canadian-style healthcare reform initiative that would guarantee healthcare coverage for all Californians, including those with HIV and AIDS, the insurance industry has retained consultants within the gay/lesbian/bi community to distort this vital initiative and to whip up opposition to it.

Campaign reporting records show that the gay community slate card produced by ANGLE has been funded by the anti-186 campaign committee (funded primarily by insurance companies). Moreover, prominent gay community activist David Mixner (founder of ANGLE) and his consulting group have received over $33,900 from Aetna Insurance and the anti-186 forces to work against Prop 186 in our community.

As a part of its propaganda campaign against 186, the campaign has spread outright falsehoods about the initiative through our community. Here is the real story:

Prop 186, the California Health Security Act, provides every California resident all medical care necessary for diagnosis, treatment or prevention of illness as determined by the patient's chosen provider. Prop 186 is not "government-run" medical care. The initiative sets up a fund that takes the place of insurers and pays the bills of the private medical care industry. Coverage includes full inpatient and outpatient medical care benefits, full mental health benefits, full long term care benefits (either at home or in a nursing institution), prescription drug coverage and some dental benefits. Financed through existing federal, state, and local governmental programs, a payroll and individual tax and cigarette tax, Prop 186 replaces premiums, co-payments, and deductibles, and provides complete coverage to all residents and yet will not increase overall healthcare spending.

As we all know, for people with HIV/AIDS, attempting to access comprehensive or even adequate healthcare can be near to impossible. PWAs are eight times more likely to have lost their health coverage than those without AIDS and 30 percent have no health coverage at all. Prop 186 eliminates preexisting conditions limits and policy maximums.

The only medical care the commissioner may exclude from coverage is that for which there is no evidence that the service improves the health of the patient. With a minimal threshold for coverage, new innovative treatments will be encouraged. Currently, Blue Cross (considered by many to be the best coverage around) gets to decide what is experimental or not, without any accountability to the consumer (policy language precludes coverage for "services or supplies that we consider to be Experimental or Investigative").

The commissioner is forbidden from rationing healthcare based upon inadequate funding.

Don't be fooled by anti-186 paid campaign staffers masquerading as gay activists. This is the healthcare reform we've been waiting for. Join numerous AIDS community groups supporting the initiative, including LIFE AIDS Lobby (a coalition of 85 lesbian/gay/bi community groups) in supporting 186. Vote as if your life depended on it. It just may.

Czar Crash

If Proposition 186 passes, one of the first things the proposition requires be done is the appointment of a health czar by the governor. Guess who will make that appointment? My bet is it will be our current Gov, your friend and mine, Pete Wilson, whether Kathleen Brown wins or not. Surely he would not appoint Dannemeyer, Doolittle or Dornan, would he? Does anyone believe he will appoint a gay-friendly person to what will be the most powerful office in the state? An office that will control a budget of over $100 billion. The first election for health czar will not be held until November of 1998.

And just imagine the lobbying pressure that health czar will face. And what happens if the Feds don't pass the required legislation that will allow the state to take over Medicare, ERISA and Taft-Hartly plans? We'll still have big companies and labor union plans screwing around with benefits for AIDS. And who believes the seniors' lobby will allow the state to take over Medicare?

Vote no on Proposition 186. It was written by Dorothy and friends and makes a great story but bears no resemblance to reality.

Jim Spahr
Petaluma, CA

Take that Sash and ...

I have yet to see any benefit, fundraiser, party or other event of benefit to the entire community by both the title holders who wrote the letter criticizing Marcus and Don. Wearing a sash does not mean you are an automatic leader, and certainly Lias and Rozendal have displayed neither leadership or political acumen.

Quite frankly, Mr. Lias and Mr. Rozendal are living in another world; they are unclear on the concept. If they expect to draw attention to their own individual personas via writing stupid letters, then that is how we shall all remember them. Do-nothing agitators and while I'm at it, not deserving of the sashes they so vainly wear. They are the ones who "have no power here."

Tobacco Tactics

I am writing to warn the L/G/B/T community about a cynical campaign by the tobacco industry to fool California voters into increasing tobacco companies' profits while also increasing the number of tobacco-related deaths and the cost of government healthcare programs. This is to be accomplished while many of those same voters think they are simply banning cigarette machines in the lobbies of elementary schools.

Proposition 188 will gut dozens of local laws and new comprehensive state legislation regulating tobacco. It will replace them with a watered-down, statewide law which preempts other laws including ours in San Francisco. Most of those laws are tougher than Proposition 188, but they will be lost and new ones will not be allowed.

The tobacco companies want the tough regulations squashed. These are the same tobacco companies who brought you Senator Jesse Helms, who brought you genocide, homophobia, racism, sexism, and bad manners.

Polls indicate Prop. 188 is winning. Don't be fooled. Vote NO on Proposition 188! Tell your friends.

R. Wood Massi
San Francisco

Support Prop. 186

Our community needs to support Proposition 186. Why? Do we really need the health insurance companies who have made pickpocketing Californians a high art form? We should have controls on a system so clearly set up to benefit the few at great expense to many. We can't listen to scare tactics of those who would bash Proposition 186.

It is true this system is untested and California would be a proving ground. But that is exactly how Canada started. One province at a time. Healthcare is a big thing to change and the single state approach is much more advantageous.

There is no plan on earth that would ever suit the greed of the major players. Proposition 186 would make it more cost effective and fair. How does Aetna or Blue Cross build lavish office buildings or give their executives perks? Our premiums. That money is a sizable sum and it goes nowhere towards healthcare. Some label Proposition 186 unwise. Unwise for whom? 92 percent of the money raised to defeat Proposition 186 comes from the health insurance companies. Not always our best friends.

Think about health security. Do you know of anyone with AIDS ever having sailed through the maze of health insurance roadblocks to get decent, basic care? It's a mess. Or just getting the damn insurance. The system is not set up to anyone's favor but a small unaccountable group. Have you ever heard of someone paying into their policy for years, just to have an out of pocket surprise?

The tired cliché of healthcare rationing (a common scare tactic) supposedly as a result of Proposition 186 is in fact a reality now. If you can't pay the inflated price of health insurance you are out of the picture. That's rationing and it isn't very cost effective. Most people will go without care until it is an emergency. And we all pick up the tab for it through taxes. Not very smart.

Proposition 186 is inclusive of the gay community, promotes preventative maintenance, makes good business sense, and is long overdue. Turn down the volume of the health insurance lobby and remember, they are using your premiums to try and defeat Proposition 186. Don't let them.

What a profound change there would be if those facing a grave illness had a system that worked for them instead of fighting almost every request. We can make this healthcare system a lot better for our friends, and Proposition 186 is a way out of the gridlock of greed.

Listen beyond the soundbites, and if you want more information or would like to volunteer, call (415) 824-1936. We need to act now.

LETTERS

Fear of Nudity

Regarding the letter in the October 13 issue of the B.A.R. by Jim Gordon, I was one of the three friends who, with him, were enjoying the day sans clothes. I am a naturist, when it's warm and I can get by without clothes, I don't wear them!

I live in San Diego but have been visiting San Francisco two to three times a year since 1978. Your city has been a breath of fresh, free air. Conservative, ass backward southern California is a pain...but it's home. A few days in The City, a place where I've come to expect a certain degree of tolerance of individual freedom, is just what I need now and then to keep my head from going critical mass. So imagine my surprise when, in the city for the Folsom St. Fair, I discovered that the S.F. Police Dept. considers a woman's nipple or a man's dick more dangerous than crack dealing in the Civic Center.

What the hell is going on in San Francisco?

So some people consider nudity offensive? Guess what, they don't have to look! I consider cigarette smoke offensive, that's why I avoid it most of the time, which is a far cry from demanding that smoking be prohibited. My body ain't drop dead gorgeous, but it ain't a threat to anyone's health either. Get a grip, people. Gymnophobia is just another piece of the sex-phobia pie, homophobia is another.

Ordination Coordination

Thank you for your fine article about our church. I have received several positive comments from friends, a few calls for information, and even a call from a theology professor from the East Bay who is considering forming a parish there.

I thought you might want to print the details of Philip Deemer's ordination in the next edition since we did not get them to you in time for the article. The information is as follows:

Saturday, November 12, 1994
11:00 in the morning
Central United Methodist Church
53rd and "H" Streets
Sacramento, California

For more information, people may contact Philip at (916) 725-9221. It will be a festive and exciting event. A Lutheran pastor is delivering the sermon and a United Methodist pastor will be chanting the litany. The Very Rev. Robert Spencer, our own canon for pastoral support, will be flying in from South Carolina for the event, and I am bringing a contingent of Russian River prisoners.

Disposable Gay Culture

As a gay man, I like looking at pictures of dreamy, unearthly studs as much as the next guy. But what has always bothered me about the B.A.R. is the constant juxtaposition of stories about the toll AIDS has taken on gay life, possible cures, gay spirituality, etc. side-by-side with your usual semi-pornographic ads for "Massages (sensual & otherwise)" and (ahem) "Escorts & Models." More than just being exploitative and a steady source of revenue for your paper, it's degrading!

It's a constant reminder of the way many of us gay men treat each other — like tissue, to be "blown" and then disposed of! As always, heaven forbid that you're overweight to any degree (like I am), over 30 years of age (I'm 35 — yeeeks!) or interested in any kind of true emotional feelings and/or intimacy.

It's depressing! It's been "sold" a thousand times already, and it perpetuates superficial, negative feelings among gay men struggling with such a hate-filled culture to think of themselves only as "sexual beings." You & I both know we're more than that (although your "escorts, models & masseurs" may not truly think like that.)

Why not just subdivide the B.A.R. into two entirely different papers? One with your excellent, interesting, in-depth, and serious articles and letters to the editor, and the other a B.A.R. After Dark (a la Hugh Hefner).

It's unrealistic and probably unprofitable, I know, but AIDS prevention and fighting bigotry and oppression somehow just doesn't mesh with Mr. Muscle System and his masturbation-inspiring physique.

As another writer remarked to you a few weeks ago ("Letters," B.A.R., 10/13), sometimes it takes all the willpower I have not to immediately unzip and skip straight to the "Arts & Entertainment" section, only then to feel depressed, degraded, and just another piece of "tissue" blown and disposed of. Gay pride shouldn't be emphasized like this — porno on parade.

Now, I think I'll lie down for a while with very mixed emotions.

Proposition M(ean-spirited)

This is an open letter to the entire lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, and queer community. I am asking that our community help take up the fight of another historically oppressed group: the homeless. Mayor Jordan has put on the ballot yet another proposition that plans to punish the homeless in San Francisco. Proposition M, if passed, would prohibit individuals from sitting or laying down on the sidewalks in San Francisco's downtown and neighborhood commercial districts.

It is important for our community to speak out against this proposition. An attack on one group's civil rights is an attack on all of us. Jordan believes that it is acceptable to violate the civil rights of individuals in order to stop people from sitting or laying on the sidewalk. There is already existing law that prohibits people from aggressively panhandling. This measure will also only keep people from sitting on the sidewalks in commercial districts, the law does not prevent them from moving around the corner into residential neighborhoods to sit down.

This proposition is in danger of passing because the homeless make most people nervous. It is safer and easier for some people to avoid a problem than to deal with it. The issue of homelessness is no exception. The intention behind this is really a thinly-veiled attack on the homeless community. This proposition is a cosmetic gesture, getting rid of the issue of homelessness by shoving them out of our sight. Proposition M does nothing to address the needs of the homeless on our streets, such as housing, jobs, job training and healthcare.

City officials have stated that this proposition will not cost the city any money, which is not the case. People violating Proposition M will be fined first $100, then $400, then on the third offense can be jailed up to six months. It is very clear that the homeless, who are targeted through this measure, will be unable to pay these fines and will eventually be jailed. Make no mistake, fining and jailing these individuals will cost our city, and its taxpayers, money. This could all be part of Jordan's plan to house the homeless, by putting them in jail. Quickly our jails may become nothing more than debtor prisons: which sends a clear message that Jordan, and our city, consider the homeless to be criminals and not unfortunate victims of circumstance.

I ask you to take a look inside yourselves and decide where you stand. If you believe that homelessness will go away and ease your conscience if it is taken out of our sight, then vote for Proposition M. On the other hand, if you know that the issue of homelessness won't go away by getting the homeless out of the public's sight, then vote No on Proposition M.

Please help protect the civil rights of all San Franciscans and vote against this mean spirited and costly measure. If people are interested in more information or would like to help, call the No on M Coalition at (415) 397-4911.

Smoke Gets In Your Eyes

I am writing to urge all Californians to vote NO on Proposition 188.

Prop 188 is financed by millions of cigarette industry dollars, especially Philip Morris Inc. That alone should tell any voter that Prop 188 is intended to benefit the cigarette industry.

If you like to have cigarette smoke or cigar smoke blown in your face in public places, then vote YES on Proposition 188.

All of the slick and phony brochures sent to California voters urging YES votes on Prop 188 are like foxes masquerading in sheep's clothing. Those brochures have been financed by millions of cigarette industry dollars.

Prop 188 is intended to prohibit local city councils and Boards of Supervisors from enacting NO SMOKING ordinances to affect public places in their own cities and towns.

The slick brochures were sent to us by a group called "CALIFORNIANS FOR STATEWIDE SMOKING RESTRICTIONS — YES ON PROPOSITION 188 — A Committee of California Hotels, Restaurants, Philip Morris Inc, and other tobacco companies."

"Statewide Smoking Restrictions" means only the California Legislature could pass NO SMOKING laws. The cigarette industry knows they can prevent passage of any such laws in the California legislature.

Prop 188 seeks only to handcuff all city councils regarding the enactment of NO SMOKING laws and ordinances.

I will vote NO on Proposition 188.

Year of the Woman Redux

While some political analysts were quietly predicting that women would not do as well this year as in 1992's "Year of the Woman," some of those same so-called experts are now saying that women will in fact win in larger numbers than ever before on November 8. Indeed, the number of female members in the U.S. Senate could reach nine after next week's elections, up from the current seven.

The two best prospects for additional women senators are in Maine, where Republican nominee Olympia Snowe (currently a member of the House) is expected to win the seat now held by retiring Democrat George Mitchell; and Minnesota, where Democratic nominee Ann Wynn's race with her GOP opponent is considered a toss-up. A third state that could elect a woman to the Senate is Vermont, where Democrat Jan Backus is closing in on incumbent GOP Senator James Jefford.

Also, though still a close race, California Senator Dianne Feinstein is now considered likely to keep her seat. The GOP incumbent in Texas is likewise favored to win re-election.

In the House of Representatives, women candidates are expected (according to analysts from both parties) to pick up at least three seats, bringing their numbers to a historic 50 out of the 435 seats.

In governor's races (women currently hold four governorships), two female candidates are favored to defeat their male opponents, and a third, Patricia Saiki, a Republican, is given at least an even chance of winning in Hawaii. Incumbent Governor Ann Richards still faces a very tough contest in Texas against George W. Bush Jr., however.

Clearly, the Republicans will

gain a few House and a couple of Senate seats next week - the party in the White House always loses some seats in off-year elections - but Bill Clinton and the Democrats will still control Congress come November 9.

Reversing a policy of not endorsing U.S. Senate candidates that goes back nearly 20 years, the influential Los Angeles Times has strongly supported the re-election of Senator Dianne Feinstein. The Times has also endorsed Tony Miller for secretary of state and Tom Umberg for attorney general.

Political prognosticators in the East are closely watching the Massachusetts race for governor. Incumbent GOP Governor Bill Weld, often described as the most pro-gay governor in the nation, holds a whopping 30-point lead over his opponent in the polls, and many (including his gay/lesbian supporters in both parties) are looking to the 49-year-old, Harvard-educated attorney to make a bid for the GOP presidential nomination in '96.

In Oregon, Measure 16 on next Tuesday's ballot would permit physician-assisted suicide. Under the plan, control of when to end life would be in the hands of the patient, not the doctor. Doctors would provide prescriptions for drugs but would not administer them. The proposal is expected to pass. Long overdue!

The race for secretary of state between openly gay Democrat Tony Miller and his right-wing GOP opponent is probably too close to call, although I think Miller will pull this one out as long as we all remember to vote for him on Tuesday and convince another voter to cast their ballot for the acting secretary of state. Other predictions: Dianne Feinstein over Tex "My Wife Hired Her" Huffington and Pete Wilson over the better candidate, Kathleen Brown.

Gray Davis wins the race for lieutenant governor in a walk; Kathleen Connell (D) bests conservative former Assemblyman Tom McClintock; incumbent Attorney General Dan Lungren defeats Democratic challenger Tom Umberg; GOP nominee Matt Fong narrowly defeats Democrat Phil Angelides for treasurer; Art Torres (D) beats out conservative, anti-gay Republican Chuck Quackenbush for insurance commissioner; and Maureen DiMarco tops Delaine Eastin for state superintendent of public instruction. (These aren't my wishes, mind you, but my predictions. In a perfect world it would be different.)

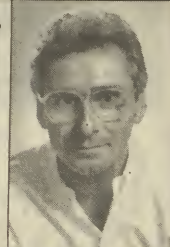

Matthew Rothschild and Robert Barnes are hosting a last-minute fundraiser/party tonight (November 3, 6-8 p.m.) for Community College Board candidates Lawrence Wong and Leslie Katz at 339 Chestnut Street. Please bring a $25 check for each candidate.

Congresswoman Nancy Pelosi, Speaker Willie Brown, and Senator Milton Marks are among those sponsoring a fundraiser/reception on Sunday, November 6 (3-5 p.m., 591-6622 for information), for BART Director James Fang's re-election bid.

Irony: the endorsement of Democratic Governor Mario Cuomo by NYC GOP Mayor Rudy Giuliani is being touted in the New York press as "pulling Cuomo ahead" in that state's tough gubernatorial race. And Los Angeles Mayor Richard Riordan, the popular chief executive of the nation's second largest city, broke ranks with his own Republican Party this week to endorse Senator Dianne Feinstein. Election Eve Horrors Scare Citizenry Petrifying Propaganda

by Nancy Boutilier

Vampires, ax murderers, goblins, and fairies — nothing I saw on Halloween in the Castro proved nearly as scary as the steady diet of election propaganda I've been spoon-fed the past few weeks. As usual, the tricks are outnumbering the treats in this ritual known as the electoral process.

The biggest trick of all may have been played on Marisela Garcia, the undocumented worker once employed by Michael Huffington as a nanny and now fingered in the press for INS investigation. Other frightful tricks include the Orwellian naming done by some of the organizations working for and against state propositions. Proponents of the ghoulish Prop. 187 are calling it SOS, claiming to "Save our State," while "Californians for Statewide Smoking Restrictions" are in favor of these restrictions only because they are generally less restrictive than current law. Lesbians & Gays of African Descent for Democratic Action have countered by calling Prop. 187 "Screw Our State," adding, "It's racism and bad public policy."

When it comes to television, the rule in the U.S. Senate race is this: if the ad is about Dianne Feinstein, it's a Huffington ad, and if it's about Huffington, it's a Feinstein ad.

And how about Quentin Kopp's "getting the job done" campaign, which features him in a TV spot driving a victory lap around a race track in a sports car? It excites me about as much as those no-brain boys showing off by burning rubber in the high school parking lot. I feel like invoking the old Midas ad: "Your muffler. Fix it!"

But that would sound too much like a position on San Francisco's No on Prop. K campaign, you know, "It isn't broken — So, don't fix it." This particular referendum has to do with informed one, is to collect fliers passed out on street corners. No more objective than television spots, at least these handouts carry a pretense of going beyond sound bites. There are limits to what info you will receive this way because certain candidates canvass different neighborhoods. You probably won't get the scoop on everyone. However, it is revealing to see which candidates make the effort to campaign in person in the Castro as well as finding out why their lesbian and gay supporters see them as political allies.

There seem to be two basic approaches to self-promotion. The Who I Am approach is particularly common for non-incumbents. Supervisor hopeful Mabel Teng has served up a particularly thorough version of this approach with her 14-page booklet Mabel Teng: A Woman's Story.

"I've written this book," the tome begins, "because I want you to understand who I am and why I want to be your Supervisor. ... Today, campaigns are dominated by 30-second sound bites and campaign messages while the real issues that affect our lives are lost." What a fresh concept, I thought, until I read Ahimsa Sumchai's pamphlet: "Politicians come and go, political double talk dominates campaigns, and issues get lost. ... I've written this brochure because I want you to know who I am and how I plan to work for you."

Then there's the Problem Solver approach, as demonstrated by incumbent Carole Migden's "Get Serious" slogan. Migden offers "real solutions to real problems," while Arthur Jackson's 1994 Wish List outlines "what every San Franciscan wants."

Ammiano's Oscar

Well, if you read the San Francisco Voter Information Pamphlet, you are bound to be skeptical about Jackson's presumption of consensus. The book is chock-full of arguments pro and con on every proposition, followed by rebuttals from the opposing viewpoint and then a host of other arguments that individuals and groups pay to place in the pamphlet. For every wish Jackson identifies, its accompanying fulfillment would call forth a chorus of rebutters, I'm sure.

If there's an Academy of sorts that gives Oscars for campaign ads, Tom Ammiano's "Too big for their britches" flier deserves recognition. It features three hip-hopotami photographed from the rear sporting tight pants reading "City Bureaucrats," "Big Business," and "Board of Supervisors." The flier sticks to the problem-solution model and echoes the window signs which proclaim Ammiano to be "A Supervisor you can TALK to." A supe you can laugh with rather than at, perhaps, but talk to? That's only if you can squeeze a word in edgewise with this Chatty Cathy!

Nevertheless, his is the only material I saw urging a return to district elections, and for that stance alone, I believe he has been listening. Big points there, garbage collection and recycling, but as with most of these battles, the trick is to get up as many signs as possible which read "Yes on X" or "No on Z" way before anyone knows what the proposal is. By election day, voters aren't informed, but they do have the proper word association stamped in their commuter brains.

Mind you, I'm not really addressing the meat of these campaigns, just the message. If you want to address the meat, you have to do your homework. Voting in California feels more like a standardized test than a democratic privilege. It's best to start with the official voter information pamphlets if you want to know who and what will actually be on the ballot. Other sources are likely to mislead you.

If you follow the daily news, you are unlikely to know that most statewide elections have more than two candidates running, representing more than two parties. While I keep hearing that disillusioned citizens are turning to Republican candidates for a change, I can't help believing that if change is really what people want, then candidates from the Libertarian, American Independent, Green, or Peace and Freedom parties should be attracting far more attention and support than they are currently receiving.

A dummy or two

Once again, our city has outdone the state for sheer volume of official material. It takes 234 pages to fully outline the upcoming local elections in this year's San Francisco Voter Information Pamphlet and "only" 118 pages in two volumes to outline the state elections.

While there are no police-sponsored ventriloquist dolls on this fall's local ballot, it's safe to say there might be a dummy or two. Paid arguments in the SF Information Pamphlet give voters an idea of where different groups and candidates stand on particular issues — for instance, who's supporting Prop. H for Domestic Partner Retirement Benefits and what twisted rationalizations our mayor could cook up for his Sidewalk Prohibitions known as Prop. M, which will make it "unlawful to sit or lie down upon a public sidewalk, or upon a blanket, chair, stool, or any other object placed upon a public sidewalk."

Another route to becoming an opinionated voter, if not an

by Kent Brandley

Cynthia Ann Greene, a 40-year-old prisoner dying of AIDS, is the object of a massive "fax and phone" campaign mounted by ACT UP San Francisco to call attention to her plight and that of other terminally ill prisoners in California.

The prisoner's mother and sister, contacted at the family's Bernal Heights home in San Francisco on Tuesday, said they were "praying and hoping" for her release and told the Bay Area Reporter they hoped to have some word from the state by week's end.

Theresa Barnes, the prisoner's sister, and Ann Greene, her mother, said Cynthia Ann was in prison for violation of parole. She is near death and fading fast, her family said. She went from a woman's size ten to a size one, her sister said. Her weight shrank from 140 pounds to only 100 pounds during the last 30 days.

Her mother said her daughter had contracted pneumonia and her health was deteriorating rapidly partly due to stress in prison. The family pleaded with "everyone and anyone" for help. They said they would love to have Cynthia Ann back home "where she can get the proper medical help and love from her family." Further, they said, she posed no threat to anyone. "None whatsoever - she's too sick to..."

Both the ACT UP Prison Issues Committee and the Coalition to Support Women Prisoners at Chowchilla are demanding that Greene be granted an early compassionate release from prison.

Organizers cite a recent San Francisco Chronicle series documenting medical neglect and abuse at state prisons. Both organizations are asking state legislators to draw up an expedited early release policy for all terminally ill prisoners in California, according to a statement released Monday by Bay Area activists Miriam Berman, Judy Greenspan, and Rebecca Shuman.

The women said that for the past two weeks ACT UP and other organizations have been conducting the fax and phone campaign directed toward California Department of Corrections Director James Gomez to speed Greene's release.

They say Greene is dying of AIDS-related complications at the Central California Women's Facility in Chowchilla, the largest women's prison in the U.S.

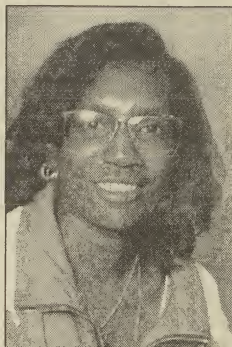

Organizers say Greene's release papers are currently sitting on Gomez's desk. They urged B.A.R. readers to join the hundreds of concerned gay, lesbian, and other citizens who have faxed or phoned the director's office on Greene's behalf.

The B.A.R. called Gomez's office for his version of what is going on. After being transferred twice, the reporter was told that the director's public information person would call back. No call had been received at press time.

In a release from ACT UP San Francisco, organizers said, "California incarcerates the largest prison population [in the nation] and yet does not have an effective compassionate release program for terminally ill prisoners. Before a dying prisoner can be released, prison medical personnel, the warden's office, the California Department of Corrections director, and the sentencing judge must all participate in a lengthy sign-off process."

"There is no humane reason why Cynthia Greene should not be released back into the community to spend her last days with her mother and family," Berman, spokesperson for the coalition, said. Earlier this year, Berman noted, the efforts of the

COMMUNITY NEWS

A Burgeoning Problem
AIDS Activists Face Workplace Discrimination

by Jim Driscoll

San Francisco and the Bay Area have long been a Mecca and a refuge for lesbians and gays tired of hiding their sexuality. Signs of lesbian and gay influence and acceptance abound: San Francisco has two open lesbians on a gay-friendly Board of Supervisors; Berkeley has an openly gay mayor; every recent San Francisco mayor has curried favor with the gay community. Major Bay Area corporations like Levi Strauss, Genentech, and Apple have gay-lesbian employee organizations and full domestic partners benefits.

But some San Francisco AIDS activists who aren't lucky enough to work for gay-positive companies say that, for all the grief they take from AIDS-phobic co-workers and bosses, they might as well be living in Peoria or Roanoke. One of those people is "Connie," who worked as a technician for a local research laboratory until recently. Because she has many friends with AIDS, Connie — who prefers to withhold her last name — became an activist, educated herself about AIDS, and shared her ideas with fellow workers.

That's when Connie's boss began calling her "that lesbo with AIDS."

At the same time, the boss assigned Connie heavy lifting tasks, knowing she had a back injury. When her back problem worsened he urged her not to file an injury report, insisting it would raise their insurance. When she tried to file anyway, he fired her and alleged that, instead of a back injury, Connie was sick with AIDS.

Connie is HIV negative.

After Connie was fired, she threatened suit. At that time, she told the B.A.R., her employer warned that if she claimed psychological harm, she would be subjected to hours of depositions about her "pre-existing problems." Connie, who was an abused child, is reluctant to relish all her childhood traumas with hostile lawyers.

Connie is torn between her need for privacy, and the obligation she feels to defend the rights of women and people with HIV. "The laws are hopelessly weak and inadequate," she protests. "It's almost impossible for lesbians or people with HIV to win with anything less than an iron-clad case."

Connie's boss does not confine his abuses to lesbians: she charged that gay men are another favorite target. After one gay former employee severely cut his finger in the laboratory, causing blood to spurt over the equipment, the boss allegedly yelled, "A fag with AIDS! Everyone get out or you'll get AIDS!" After the incident the boss called a department meeting to strategize on how to decontaminate the lab — without bothering to ask if the man had AIDS. Being openly gay seemed proof enough.

"My boss simply laughs at the rights of women, gays, and people with HIV," she said. "I'm finding that the law does not take us much more seriously than he does."

Two more stories

"Bob" (who also prefers to avoid giving his last name on the record) has AIDS-related complex, but is still able to do his clerical job. It is not his health or demeanor that caused his fellow workers to suspect that Bob has AIDS: it was his volunteer efforts for a large AIDS organization. Besides being made the butt of workplace gossip, Bob has been accused of being "dirty and unclean" and of "spreading all those diseases people with AIDS get." He complained quietly to the employer. "Fifteen months have passed," he told the B.A.R., "without their lifting a finger."

Like many gay workers who experience discrimination in San Francisco, Bob fears retaliation if he seeks redress. "Ordinary working gays were always the mudsill of the American caste system," Bob said angrily. "AIDS is making us untouchables."

tion until a funding cutback forced him to seek part-time employment, after which he inquired at a luxury apartment building that had previously provided him with part-time work. He was told the building manager was looking to hire someone, and was urged to apply. But once Woo revealed his association with the AIDS CBO, the manager didn't need him.

Instead, he told the B.A.R., the manager hired a vehemently AIDS-phobic heterosexual who reportedly began harassing gay workers about AIDS, to the point of demanding they scrub toilets, phones, and doorknobs after each use. The manager also allegedly told one worker that "all gays should be thrown into concentration camps to stop the spread of AIDS." Woo complained to the San Francisco Human Rights Commission.

After one year of the commission's attempts to mediate, Woo's ex-employer continues to stonewall. Four new employees, none of them gay, have been hired; employees who supported Woo's complaint suffered retaliations, including the loss of traditional Christmas bonuses; the employer and its lawyers dismiss the idea that Woo might be entitled to redress, compensation, or an apology.

"So far," says Woo, "the commission has been disappointing. If an employer lacks good intentions to begin with, there's little the commission can do to rectify AIDS discrimination. When we need protection most, it's not there."

Larry Brinkin, San Francisco Human Rights Commission specialist on gay and AIDS complaints, says, "Much of the blame rests squarely with the Governor's office in Sacramento. Wilson repeatedly vetoes essential human rights protection. Local human rights ordinances need enforcement teeth. Wilson keeps them toothless by insuring that they remain pre-empted by his weak state law. While we've had tremendous success mediating hundreds of complaints, that doesn't negate the problems with companies that are very bigoted."

Lee Woo blames Wilson as well, but, he insists, "responsibility doesn't end with the governor. Our supervisors have ignored my requests for a wake up call to the Human Rights Commission. All city officials need to take AIDS discrimination more seriously."

"How can San Francisco hope to maintain its community-based AIDS organizations, if we let employers get away with discriminating simply because someone worked for an AIDS CBO?"

A supervisory aide, who declined to go on record, agrees with Woo's criticism of the Human Rights Commission. "Three years ago," she said, "the city gave the commission $100,000 to re-write the ordinance. We were supposed to get a new, model ordinance. We got nothing for our money and are stuck with a defective, out-dated ordinance that is not uniform."

"As a result, lesbians, gays, and people with AIDS miss fundamental protections in the workplace." ▼

"Public Notice" is the way City Hall informs citizens about scheduled hearings, meetings, bidding on City contracts - the where, when and what of governmental business.

In a democracy, Public Notice is a right and not a privilege. This essential "right to know" is guaranteed to all without discrimination. It is Public Notice that creates citizen awareness and participation in government.

Citizens should be able to get Public Notice free of charge. Citizens should not have to pay for their Public Notice.

Conroy Wants To Cut 'Big Fat Middle Management'

by Dennis Conkin

Now that she is seeking a second — and first full — term as a San Francisco supervisor, Annemarie Conroy says whatever controversy there may have been about her appointment to replace Doris Ward in April 1992 has faded.

Ward vacated her post as supervisor to replace Assessor Dick Hongisto, who had been named chief of police, after which Conroy, a third generation San Francisco Republican, was named to Ward's post by Mayor Jordan — Conroy's godfather. She now looks back at that time with humor and confidence.

"Everyone said, 'Who is this woman? The mayor has lost his mind,'" Conroy laughed when she spoke with the Bay Area Reporter. "I took it as the ultimate sink-or-swim situation, and decided I had two years to prove something — that when it came time for election I wasn't some little god-daughter.

"I was a well-educated young woman; as a business attorney it was very difficult to be labeled a goddaughter, but I think I've successfully shattered that."

Conroy also quickly dispelled worries that she was anti-gay, when she performed a spring 1992 stint as celebrity bartender at the old Lily's gay bar on Market Street as a fundraiser for gay bashing victim Cameron "Tina" Tanner, who later died of a bludgeoning by a bat-wielding killer who is still at large.

"I think that I have a good relationship with the gay community in San Francisco," Conroy told the B.A.R. "I think there are some people that try to say I don't. But I think people understand that the money I've saved for San Francisco means programs saved, and that means lives saved."

The funds Conroy mentioned were recovered by the city after she discovered an accounting error had caused it to overpay into the $5 billion retirement system.

About a year later Conroy revealed that the city was paying the employer's contribution for health benefits for hundreds of city workers on extended unpaid leaves — as well as people long dead, dismissed from city employ, and, in some cases, people who were known to no one in any city department.

"If we didn't have the $82 million — the $33 million that came from the retirement system, and the additional $49 million; you could not have raised taxes to meet that — it would have all been service cuts," Conroy said. By recovering that money, she said, essential services were spared.

Conroy holds an undergraduate degree from the University of California at Berkeley and a law degree from Hastings College of the Law, specializes in business litigation in her practice, and has a reputation as a fiscal whistle blower on the board.

"I'd like to take a shot on the budget committee, to see if I could have an impact on how we are doing business in San Francisco," she told the Bay Area Reporter.

"Everybody pays taxes and everybody hates paying taxes, but what they hate more is watching their money being wasted," Conroy said.

"I've been really trying to fight the government waste going on inside City Hall, because we are not running city government efficiently. We have so many problems, in the MUNI and in the health service system. ...

"Every system in San Francisco needs top-to-bottom management audits," she said, "and we need to be better computerized so we can share data back and forth between departments. We have a very ineffective system."

San Francisco's employee base has grown so large that city leaders don't even know how many are on the payroll, she charged.

"We've grown from 10,000 to 17,000 to 26,000 employees on the city payroll. We can't even say whether we have 26,000 city employees or not. The answer you get is that it depends on whether you count permanent civil service as opposed to temporary civil service. My question is, how many more people do we include by contracting services out? How many people's paychecks are we paying as a city government?"

"That's what I'd like to know — along with what all of them are doing.

"In our budget now, we spend nearly $3 billion a year," she continued. "That means we're spending nearly $10 million every business day. That's a staggering amount of money, given the number of residents in San Francisco. When you break it down like that, it really makes you wonder where all the money is going. And we have too many generals and not enough foot soldiers.

"We've got a big fat middle management, and we need to do something about it," Conroy said.

If re-elected to a full four-year post, Conroy undoubtedly will. ▼

Smith and Yee Say S.F. Can't Afford Prop 187

by Dennis Conkin

It would cost the San Francisco criminal justice system an additional $11 million a year to implement Proposition 187, District Attorney Arlo Smith announced last week.

Smith charged that total criminal justice costs from the enactment of the proposed immigration measure would amount to more than $820 million a year.

Smith and San Francisco Board of Education member Leland Yee denounced the measure at a press conference.

"Proposition 187 is a penny-wise, pound-foolish proposal. Kicking 400,000 kids out of our schools and putting them on the streets will only result in a dramatic increase in juvenile crime," Smith said.

The proposed state measure denies all public services to undocumented immigrants, including immigrant children who would not be eligible to attend state-funded public schools.

One in seven children in California will be at risk for arrest from juvenile crime if the measure passes, Smith said.

An estimated 1.4 million illegal immigrants live in California: 400,000 are immigrant children in a population of 5.3 million California public school students.

According to Smith, there are also "extremely serious" questions regarding the legality of the measure under the equal protection clauses of the US Constitution.

Yee said implementing the measure would cost an estimated $15 billion in federal funding for education, medical care, and other public services that citizens are eligible to receive.

Yee also said the law would force educators to violate existing privacy laws, because it would require the school district to report confidential information about students to state and federal officials.

Yee also strongly criticized Governor Pete Wilson for his proposal to require citizens — including minors — to obtain state identity cards which they would be required to present before receiving services.

"The Governor really doesn't understand children. I look at my nine-year-old son. He has a difficult enough time finding his own shoes. This will just create more problems," Yee said.

Smith also said that the fiscal analysis of the measure's impact on the juvenile justice system indicates that it would result in more than $800 million in increased costs from increased juvenile crime.

Smith said the estimates were conservative, and not based on accelerated increases in the arrest rate. ▼

AC Supe Run-Off a Clear Choice for Lesbians, Gays

by Mary Ann Swissier
East Bay Correspondent

The two candidates running for the Alameda County supervisor seat formerly occupied by long-time political fixture Don Peralta have established themselves as opposites when it comes to the lesbian and gay issues.

On one hand, Oakland school member Wilma Chan admits that, while she's not completely educated on the many problems confronting the gay and lesbian community, she's willing to listen and take a hard look at county programs if they are discriminatory.

The East Bay Lesbian and Gay Democratic Club endorsed Chan, in small part because her opponent, Craig Bettencourt, failed to respond to the election questionnaire.

Calls to Bettencourt's campaign headquarters from the Bay Area Reporter were also not returned.

Veteran watchers of East Bay politics would not be surprised, since Bettencourt is backed by Alameda County Supervisor Ed Campbell, a rabid conservative; one of Campbell's more notoriously reactionary moves was to appoint a vocal opponent of gay rights, Don Nelson, to the County Human Relations Commission. Nelson tried unsuccessfully to introduce an anti-gay resolution during the height of the gays in the military debate last year.

Here are Chan's responses to some questions of concern to the gay and lesbian community:

B.A.R.: What would you do to improve funding for AIDS healthcare in Alameda County?

W.C.: "As you know, the budget is a big problem. The first thing I would do is to take a hard look at it. ... Generally speaking, we should build better partnerships between the myriad government and private agencies, that all have a specific aim. Decriminalizing needle exchange requires further study. ... Overall, we need better cooperation."

Wilma Chan

W.C.: "Again, you have to consider the budget. But that sounds reasonable, to have a full-time staff person. I would support strong hate crime legislation in the county, make commission appointments to reflect community diversity, and look into the county's commitment not to discriminate against lesbians and gays in the workplace."

What would you do to help gay youth, a group that still has a high suicide rate and an increasing number of unnecessary HIV infections?

W.C.: "I would coordinate efforts between the school districts and various agencies to create better access for youths. For example, in the Oakland School District, county agencies came to the schools to conduct AIDS Awareness programs. The same could be done for psychological counseling." ▼

Would you support full funding of the County Human Relations Commission? The chair of that board, Shirley Ware, has recommended hiring one full-time staff person to support the commissioners' research into hate crimes and discrimination against gays and lesbians, or making a part-timer into a full-timer.

Nanny and the Manchurian Candidate

Huffington's Family Values: 'Blame My Wife!'

by Karen Ocamb

The revelation that Republican Senate candidate Mike Huffington employed an illegal immigrant as a nanny for over four years and failed to pay the required taxes has shocked many voters familiar with his vociferous stand on the anti-illegal immigrant Prop 187 ballot measure. Stalwart Republicans, however, including the gay charter Republican Log Cabin Club, are sticking by Huffington and endorsing him over his Democratic rival, Dianne Feinstein.

"The endorsement stands," says Log Cabin/LA president Ritch Colbert. "It's not qualified nor is it withdrawn. I don't see any more hypocrisy than the run-of-the-mill hypocrisy that seems exacerbated and highlighted during an election year. I think it's a non-issue, because he admitted it and is willing to pay the fines and be responsible for it. It would certainly be an issue if he refused to take responsibility and refused to pay the price. And in this case, the price may even be the election."

"But we are a chartered Republican club and we stand by the Republicans we have endorsed."

The Republican faithful backing Huffington does not, however, include Los Angeles Republican Mayor Richard Riordan, who endorsed Feinstein on Sunday, October 30. Like his New York City counterpart Richard Giuliani, who endorsed Democratic gubernatorial candidate Mario Cuomo, Riordan said he was supporting the person he felt would better serve the city.

Feinstein, meanwhile, is taking full advantage of Huffing-

ton's political misstep, saying "he got caught with his hand in the cookie jar." She told reporters that Huffington's charges that she has employed illegal immigrants in her San Francisco home are "false," and that essentially he doesn't tell the truth. Feinstein's office checked her past employment record after the so-called "nannygate" issue forced two of President Clinton's choices for attorney general, Zoe Baird and Kimba Wood, to withdraw their names from consideration. Huffington had just been elected to Congress.

The revelation of Huffington's employment of an illegal immigrant came just days before a Los Angeles Times poll showed the two candidates in a neck and neck race, with Feinstein leading by only a margin of three percent of likely voters. The Times poll was taken after both had expressed their position on Prop. 187: Huffington for, Feinstein against.

However, Huffington's outspoken stand in favor of Prop. 187 vies with his record. "The hostility of this state toward illegal immigration has risen in direct proportion to the weakness of our political leaders to enforce the immigration laws already on the books," Huffington said in announcing his support for 187. "We have cut corners, looked the other way and sent the wrong message - that breaking the law pays, that only fools go through the proper immigration channels."

At an October 26 fundraiser in San Diego, Huffington told a Times reporter: "The employer sanctions to me make a lot of sense. My concern is if we don't have a tamper-proof [identification] card, there are forgeries out there and we can't hold an employer responsible if he has what he thinks is a citizenship paper."

Then, at an emotional news conference October 27, Huffington and his wife Arianna (the minister in MSIA - pronounced "Messiah" - a religion or cult, depending upon who is describing it, based in Southern California), confessed that they had broken the 1986 federal law that requires employers to verify a workers citizenship status. Failure to fill out the requisite forms, which are then to be placed on file with the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Services, is also a crime. Civil penalties for violating the law are up to $10,000 for each immigrant hired, with repeat offenders subject to possible criminal prosecution and jail.

Since the "Nannygate" revelation, other workers at the Huffingtons' $4 million Santa Barbara residence have suggested that other illegal immigrants may have been hired temporarily.

At the news conference Huffington blamed his wife for hiring the nanny for their two small children while he was still living in Texas. Indeed, in documents filed to obtain a green card for the illegal immigrant, Arianna Huffington described herself as "head of the household." The papers were filed a year after the nanny was hired in May of 1989, and Arianna admitted she did not pay taxes on the woman's annual salary of $35,000 until June of 1990. (She did not explain how she did so for a person without a valid Social Security card.) Sources told the Times that the nanny continued to work for the Huffingtons until November of 1993.

Huffington said his wife's "instinct was kind, and it was generous, but according to law, it was wrong. ... While I was not personally involved in the hiring process, I must take full responsibility. As the head of the household, the buck stops with me. ... We have made a mistake, there is no question about it," he said. "[But] who among us has not broken the law? Who among us has not rolled through a stop sign? Who among us has not gone past 55 miles an hour?"

The INS is looking into how much the Huffingtons owe in back taxes and penalties.

Let them eat cake

Meanwhile, the campaigns march on. Feinstein is basking in the political boon Huffington seems to have handed her. But the Republican appears undaunted. Appearing on ABC's This Week With David Brinkley, Huffington said there was no conflict between his own wrong-doing and his support for 187, distinguishing between individuals who hire an illegal immigrant and the state using taxpayer money to fund services.

And in response to a question from ABC's conservative commentator George Will, about what would happen to illegal children taken out of schools, Huffington said the parents should send them to private school. "Well, I would hope...that in many cases the parents would still pay for some type of education for their children, even if it's home schooling or teaching them themselves." Asked by Will if it was "realistic" for parents who are "scrapping to make ends meet" to stay home or pay for private school, Huffington said, "Well, hopefully some have grandparents, some have aunts or uncles, some have people that are retired who can help teach the kids. But the point is, the state should not be forced to tax taxpayers in California to pay for illegal immigrants' education. It makes no sense whatsoever."

A number of Republicans, including L.A. County Sheriff Sherman Block, have come out against Prop. 187, since kids not in school would wind up on the street. The Log Cabin Club, however, still supports the ballot measure. ▼

APLA Goes Against Mixner, Endorses Universal Healthcare

by Dennis Conkin

The AIDS Project of Los Angeles board of directors last week voted to support the passage of Proposition 186 at a full board meeting of the agency.

The decision was the reversal of a decision by the agency board's executive committee, to neither endorse nor oppose the statewide universal healthcare measure, a decision that was reached after gay political operative David Mixner and an APLA board member lobbied for the board to oppose it.

The vote also followed an LA Village View investigative report by Stuart Timmons that revealed Mixner was on the No On 186 payroll while he lobbied gay organizations to oppose the healthcare reform measure.

Mixner, a key architect of the bungled gays in the military national strategy, has denied claims that he used his influence to nix a likely APLA endorsement of the single-payer healthcare measure that was endorsed by most AIDS service organizations around the state, including the San Francisco AIDS Foundation and Mobilization Against AIDS.

APLA's decision was made

at the urging of Scott Hitt, M.D., the APLA policy subcommittee chair, who is a partner in a Pacific Oaks firm that boasts of being the largest HIV medical practice in the country — with $8.2 million in annual billings.

Hitt's practice could be substantially financially impacted by provisions of Prop 186.

Mixner and Hitt are members of ANGLE, a for-profit Southern California lesbian and gay political club that caters to self-defined "upper crust" gays and lesbians. ANGLE received $45,000 from No On 186 for inclusion on its slate card.

ANGLE is now set to mail an estimated 400,000 slate cards throughout the state, using the largest lesbian and gay database in the country, to urge a no vote on 186.

Other members of the ANGLE board, along with Mixner and Hitt, are hospital consultant Eric Bauman and insurance salesman Bill Robinson. The only ANGLE member to support the measure was former Assembly candidate John Duran, a onetime director of LIFE AIDS Lobby.

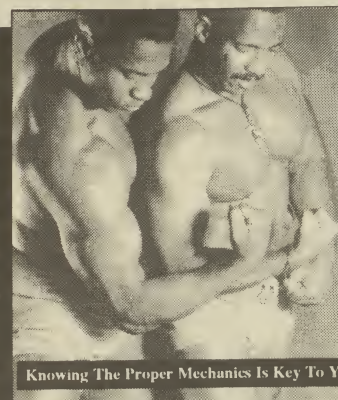

Leaders of San Francisco's Harvey Milk Lesbian and Gay Democratic Club and Alice B. Toklas Lesbian and Gay Democratic Club have unsuccessfully urged ANGLE not to mail the card to gay and lesbian households in Southern California.

According to an APLA spokesperson, the APLA board voted to approve the healthcare initiative after it was brought to the floor.

The spokesperson said that Hitt remains chair of the Public Policy Subcommittee, and there were no discussions about his tenure on the board. ▼

PROPOSITION 191 VOTE YES. Justice Courts

As it stands now, counties with less than 40,000 population have justices that serve portions of those counties. Those same justices would become municipal judges and do basically the same job they do now. This is bringing the courts into conformity and would not increase taxes. Vote yes on Prop. 191.

■ City Propositions

PROPOSITION A VOTE YES. San Bruno Jail Bonds

This facility is falling down, it's badly overcrowded, it isn't seismically safe. The city now pays Alameda County thousands of dollars a month to house our extra prison population. The Federal Government has fined us over $2.4 million in fines for overcrowding. These monies alone are an incredible drain on our shrinking city budget. The time is now to correct this problem. Vote yes on A.

PROPOSITION B VOTE YES. Old Main Library/ Asian Art Museum

It took us quite a while to agree to this bond issue. But it makes sense to restore this lovely old building and seismically upgrade it. The Asian Art Museum is raising private funds to move into it. We have one of the finest Asian art collections in the world, and it should have its own space. This bond issue would finish the clean-up and rebirth of Civic Center. As citizens of this great city, it is our duty and civic pride to retrofit this great building. Vote yes on Prop. B.

PROPOSITION C VOTE YES. City Hall Improvement Bonds

These bonds are necessary to bring this old building up to code by doing many basic things like wiring and new plumbing. These items and several others were not included in the Civic Center bonds for seismic retrofitting. It deserves your vote. Yes on C.

PROPOSITION D VOTE NO. Sewer Revenue Bonds

Enough is enough: we have already spent billions of dollars on our new sewer system. It looks to us that the powers-that-be want to continue this huge pork barrel project. Vote no on Prop. D.

PROPOSITION E VOTE YES. Commission on the Status of Women

Your yes vote will make this commission a charter commission and ensure its longevity. This has become one of our most important commissions and has earned charterhood. Vote yes on Prop. E.

PROPOSITION F VOTE YES. Collective Bargaining

A yes vote here would stop the salary survey method of controlling salaries and allow the City and workers to negotiate salaries through collective bargaining. Who knows, it might even lower some of our overbloaded wages. Vote yes on E.

PROPOSITION G VOTE NO. Building Inspection Commission

A lot of improvement is needed in the city's Building Department. We believe that reform should come from within the city government itself. We do not need another high-priced commission to reinvent the wheel. We urge a no vote on Prop. G.

PROPOSITION H VOTE YES. Domestic Partners Retirement Benefits

This proposition would simply extend the work already started by the city's Domestic Partners ordinance. It would extend basic civil rights, health care and retirement benefits to qualified domestic partners. We take a strong yes position on Proposition H.

PROPOSITION I VOTE NO. Rent Control

Rent control is already a joke in this city. It was supposed to stop when it capped 5 percent. That happened, and it still goes on. What this proposition would do is eliminate the 4 unit rule. What that means is that some seniors who have 2 units and live in one could not get higher rents or evict tenants without protracted legal expense. Let's stop picking on our seniors. Vote no on Proposition I.

PROPOSITION J VOTE YES. Official Newspapers

Citizens should be able to get free legal notices at their convenience and not have to buy a newspaper for same. The change this year placed all of these types of notices in the hands of the San Francisco newspaper monopoly. Vote yes on J to change back.

PROPOSITION K VOTE NO. Collection of Garbage and Recycling

We think that the campaign literature for the No side sums this up properly: "If it ain't broke, don't fix it." Vote no on Prop. K.

PROPOSITION L VOTE YES. Elections Task Force

This would create a task force to draft plans for a different method of electing supervisors. This plan would have to come back to the Board, and then back to us, the voters. The cost is reasonable, and maybe we can get better diversity on the Board. Vote yes on Prop. L.

PROPOSITION M VOTE NO. Sidewalk Prohibitions

This ordinance would prohibit persons from sitting or lying down on sidewalks from 7 in the morning until 10 at night in specified commercial districts. It smacks of Big Brother politics, which we don't need. Vote no on Prop. M.

PROPOSITION N VOTE NO. General Assistance Payments

We find this just another form of harassing people on welfare. We don't want to think about the new fleabag hotels this proposal would create. We should look to help the homeless, not harass them. Vote no on Prop. N.

PROPOSITION O VOTE NO. Downtown Transit Assessment District Preparation

What a joke, to add more taxes to an already overtaxed business community. We even add insult to injury when we attempt to tax them for a public transportation system that doesn't function. The millions collected from this tax would just pour down the gaping maw of bureaucratic nightmare called Muni. Does this city want to drive more business away? We hope not— vote no on Prop. O.

PROPOSITION P VOTE NO. Ferry Building and Pier 52

We agree with San Francisco Tomorrow, the Port has played games before, and this seems like another one. Let the Port come up with specific plans and costs and include seismic retrofits, then the public could vote on this proposal honestly. Vote no on P.

PROPOSITION Q VOTE YES. Neighborhood Crime Prevention

We think this is a good and honest start to help eliminate neighborhood crime. The cost of $900,000 a year for the next 3 years is not high. We think this program is worthy of your support. Vote yes on Q.

PROPOSITION R NO RECOMMENDATION. Youth Commission

We make no recommendation on this proposition. ▼

Riordan says that the mayor views Feinstein's opponent as "an embarrassing empty suit with deep pockets" and little else.

Incidentally, President Bill Clinton will be in San Francisco this weekend to give a last-minute boost to the campaigns of Dianne Feinstein and Kathleen Brown.

Some of my longtime readers have asked, so here are my recommendations: Dianne Feinstein for U.S. senator, Kathleen Brown for governor, Gray Davis for lieutenant governor, Tom Umberg for attorney general, Tony Miller for secretary of state, Phil Angelides for treasurer, Kathleen Connell for controller, Art Torres for insurance commissioner, and Delaine Eastin for superintendent of public instruction.

For the Board of Supervisors: Tom Ammanno, Annemarie Conroy, Susan Leal, Carole Migden, and Kevin Shelley.

For the Community College Board: Leslie Katz and Lawrence Wong.

For the Board of Education: Anthony Chow and Dr. Dan Kelly.

State propositions: Yes on 181, 183 and 186. No on 184, 185, 187 and 188.

S.F. County propositions: Yes on A, B, C, D, E, H, J, N and Q. No on K and O.

And remember: vote as you please — but please vote! ▼

if you ask me.

The other way to prepare for the test, I mean election, is to read the "cliff notes" — those handy-dandy endorsement cards and newspaper listings that offer the answers with little discussion of the questions. In a bold show of unity, the Harvey Milk Lesbian/Gay/Bisexual Democratic Club and the Alice B. Toklas Lesbian/Gay Democratic Club joined forces and combined resources to offer a shared slate titled "Lavender Sweep '94."

In some cases, it's not easy to trace the endorsers. The Official San Francisco Democratic Party Voter Guide recommends Ammanno, Susan Leal, Migden, Kevin Shelley and Teng for the Board of Supes, while the San Francisco Edition of the Democratic Voter Checklist has a front-page spotlight on Annemarie Conroy, followed by another full-page tribute to Conroy and recommendations for only two other candidates for the Board, Sylvia Courtney and Bruce Quan. Hmmm. That's fishy...until you find the tiny "notice to voters" which reads: "This document was prepared by the California Democratic Voter Checklist, not an official political party organization. ... Appearance is paid for and authorized by each candidate and ballot measure which is designated by an *" — which happens to be most of the local candidates, including Conroy, Courtney, and Quan.

Perhaps most haunting of all in the election materials is the California Ballot Pamphlet photo which reveals Pete Wilson to be looking more and more like George Bush each year.

Now that's chilling. ▼

Your Choice
Tuesday, Nov. 8:

Lose by the margin of despair...

Dear friend,

The stakes are high. Think who gains power if we sit at home on November 8...

JESSE HELMS called the 1964 Civil Rights Act "the most dangerous legislation ever." He fought against Dr. King and opposed recognizing his memory.

When fighting Roberta Achtenberg's confirmation—solely because of her sexual orientation—he said, "call it gay bashing if you want...if you want to call me a bigot, fine." He'd be the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chair.

PAT ROBERTSON says, "I will do anything in my power to restrict the freedom of these people," about gay men and lesbians. He'd gain power and influence across the nation.

The list goes on— from the Capitol to Statehouses to county courthouses, Republicans are trying to divide our country and fan the flames of intolerance.

One conservative Republican said, "Every lesbian spear chucker in the country is hoping I get defeated."

Longtime supporters of civil rights are in the fights of their lives. Theoretical racism is returning like a plague, and hate crimes continue from Mississippi to Massachusetts.

The choice for our nation is between hate and hope. Blaming victims vs. rational AIDS policy. There are too many who want to give up on the dream of one America—retreating into our own lives and communities only lends them strength.

If we are to change history and not yield to hysteria, we cannot sit out any fight this important. Please vote on November 8— vote for hope— vote Democratic.

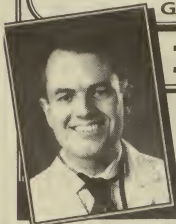

Sincerely,

Jesse L. Jackson, Sr.
Jesse L. Jackson

Or win by the margin of hope!
Keep hope alive—vote Democratic!

Oregon's Ballot Measure 13 Draws Wide Range of Opposition

by David Batterson

PORTLAND — As in 1992, when Oregonians successfully defeated Ballot Measure 9, there is a well-organized campaign to defeat the Oregon Citizens Alliance-sponsored Ballot Measure 13 this year.

The OCA has changed the wording of its anti-gay measure this time around, in hopes of gaining new supporters. The tactic has apparently changed some minds. Some Oregon political pollsters think it is possible that Measure 13 could pass.

The State of Oregon Voters' Pamphlet contains more arguments in opposition to Measure 13 than any other ballot measure — some 25 total opposing statements in all. The authors of those arguments come from leaders in big business, labor, and religious institutions; librarians; medical professionals; attorneys; politicians; and others.

The Oregon Chapter of the American Academy of Pediatrics, representing 265 children's doctors, has taken issue with the way the OCA has named Measure 13 "The Minority Status and Child Protection Act," in an apparent attempt to mislead voters. The pediatricians stated that, far from a protective measure, "Measure 13 is bad for children. Measure 13 ensures that gay and lesbian teenagers will face legalized discrimination and hatred at school and work. While doing nothing to protect children, Measure 13 sends a clear message that hostility and violence against gay people, including teenagers, is acceptable."

The Oregon Pediatric Society statement went on to say that "we condemn the fallacies, distortions, and fear underlying Measure 13. We challenge parents to learn the facts about gay and lesbian teenagers and adults, and to create an Oregon where ALL of our children can thrive and be safe."

One of the more prominent groups opposing the OCA measure is the Jewish Federation of Portland and its affiliated organizations. Robert Horenstein, the federation's director of community relations, wrote that "language changes aside, Measure 13 is the same as Measure 9; the effects would be identical. We urge you to vote NO on 13." Rabbi Emanuel Rose of Congregation Beth Israel has played a significant role in the opposition campaign.

Other religious institutions taking a strong stand against discrimination include Ecumenical Ministries of Oregon, People of Faith Against Bigotry, the Oregon-Idaho Annual Conference of the United Methodist Church, American Friends Service Committee, and Bishop Robert Ladehoff of the Episcopal Diocese of Oregon.

Ellen Lowe provided the Ecumenical Ministries opposition argument, saying that "the directors of EMO recognize the diversity among their 17 denominations and over 2,000 Oregon congregations as to their teachings about sexual orientation and expression. They are unanimous in believing that every person's human dignity ought to be respected. Measure 13 amends the Oregon Bill of Rights to take away rights rather than protect them. Vote NO on Measure 13."

The North Pacific Yearly Meeting of the Religious Society of Friends (Quakers) also opposed Measure 13, stating that "we oppose all legislation or policy which disparages lesbians, gay men, bisexuals, or transsexuals, or abridges their Constitutional or civil rights. As Friends, we seek a response that arises from the light within, and care for the human dignity of all people affected by this conflict."

Other groups and individual Oregonians opposing Measure 13 include the Oregon Education Association (OEA), Ken Harrison, CEO of Portland General Electric; Alice Dale, Executive Director of Oregon Public Employees Union (OPEU); and the Oregon Chapter, National Organization for Women.

Lon Mabon

OEA President Bruce Adams said that "Measure 13 is dangerous to our schools, threatening to destroy the very foundation upon which the American public education system rests: freedom of speech and freedom of inquiry. In effect, it would force one group's views — that of the OCA and its supporters — on all Oregon students. This is contrary to the very foundation of a sound educational system and to a free society."

Dawn Morgan, president of OPEU/SEIU Local 503, said that "Measure 13 exposes workers to unjust personnel action based on non-work-related factors. Measure 13 attempts to misuse our Constitution to take away basic rights. We urge all workers to vote no on Measure 13."

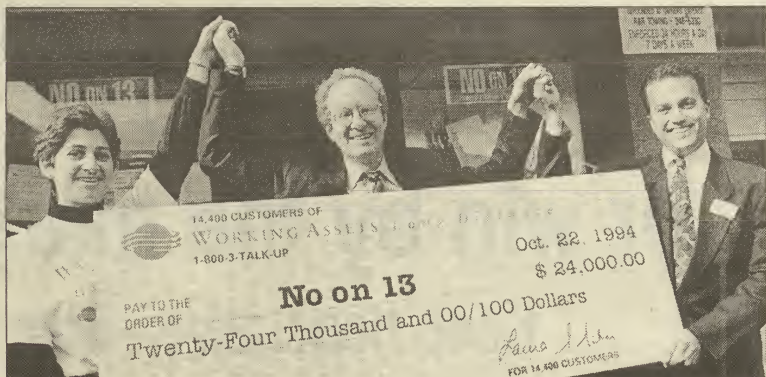

Kathleen Saadat, coordinator of African Americans for Human Rights, called Measure 13 "an attack on democratic principles and ideals, and if passed would erode all of our basic rights, regardless of sexual orientation. We as African Americans know the danger of discriminatory laws; we have been there before. Measure 13 would reestablish a precedent for Jim Crow-type laws with gay men and lesbians as the first targets. Who will be next?"

David Buchanan, Executive Director of Oregon Common Cause, stated that "civil rights for all people is a basic value of our culture and of our country. Don't be misled: Measure 13 does indeed threaten the civil rights of Oregon citizens."

People for Oregon Libraries spokesperson George Bell wrote that "the OCA Thought Police are pounding their truncheons against our library doors again. As before, the clear and stated purpose of Measure 13, as it pertains to libraries, is to impose censorship on readers and acquisition policies. A librarian could not purchase a copy of Walt Whitman's Leaves of Grass, for example." Bell urged voters to "reject this latest OCA effort to make the rest of us conform to their stunted sense of morality."

Lon Mabon, Chairman of the OCA, stated that "it isn't discrimination to make a moral judgment about wrong behavior. Measure 13 stops government from forcing citizens who don't believe homosexuality is good behavior or a minority to act as if it is! We think it's about time we establish a good, fair, moral standard." ▼

HRCF Comments Called Partisan GOPs: "Education Needs To Take Place on Both Sides of this Issue [of Homosexuality]"

by Bob Roehr

"Republicans, as a party, do nothing for the gay community, and the Log Cabin people are kidding themselves and our community if they believe the Republican party cares about the gay community," said Tim McFeeley, outgoing executive director of the Human Rights Campaign Fund (HRCF), in the October 17 issue of the Boston gay paper In Newsweekly.

"It has to be the height of political irresponsibility not to endorse Senator [Ted] Kennedy [D-MA]," he said. "Calling for the defeat of Senator Kennedy is asking for the lesbian and gay community to be lynched in this country."

The Republican National Committee took "strong issue" with those statements, calling them "short-sighted."

"Comments such as yours don't promote the dialogue and education that needs to take place on both sides of this issue [of homosexuality]," wrote Co-Chairman Jeanie Austin in a letter dated October 25. She did not explain how the GOP intended to educate homosexuals about homosexuality. Neither did she outline plans for the education of her own party members, nor offer proof that her desire for dialogue was shared by those party members.

Nevertheless, Austin said HRCF's position on the Kennedy election was "horribly hyperbolic and only diminishes the ability of the Human Rights Campaign Fund to live up to its stated mission as a bipartisan organization."

McFeeley admitted the language on Kennedy was hyperbolic but said the race is "so important for gay people, that sometimes you have to scream to say, 'This is different.'" He cited Kennedy's continued leadership in the Senate "on the few significant victories we have had," such as the Americans with Disabilities Act, Ryan White (AIDS) authorization, and fighting Jesse Helms's (R-NC) anti-gay amendments.

"The Campaign Fund has long supported fair-minded Republicans who believe that the promise of America belongs to all people," McFeeley wrote to Austin on October 28.

"Unfortunately, a number of Republican officeholders and candidates do not support ending discrimination based on sexual orientation, and are even now using anti-gay rhetoric in their campaigns. Congressman James Inhofe [Oklahoma], who vowed to discriminate against gay people in hiring for his Congressional staff, is running on a platform of 'God, gays, and guns.' Oliver North [Virginia] continually uses alarmist rhetoric about the 'radical homosexual lobby.' The list goes on. The party has shown no leadership in distancing itself from such inflammatory rhetoric or in promoting policies that would protect gay people from discrimination."

McFeeley said HRCF has contributed $31,000 to Republicans so far in this election cycle. By one measure that is a lot of money. But as HRCF's report of contributions through September 9 shows, Republican candidates received less than five percent of total contributions. Twice that amount had been given directly to the principal national campaign committees of the Democratic Party, more to individual Democratic candidates.

Rich Tafel, executive director of the national gay Log Cabin Republican Club, is dismayed that so few gays want to give their money to a party where they are despised and reviled. "You have to cultivate the parties," he said, "especially if you are a bipartisan organization. Do you meet with them? Do you talk to them? The reality is, you reap what you sow. If you don't talk to somebody, they aren't going to be good."

"I'm not trying to take anything away from Kennedy," said Tafel. "But the reality is, a bipartisan organization's goal should be to have two good candidates, so that whoever wins, the community doesn't lose." He is bitter that some have tried to label Kennedy's pro-gay Republican opponent Mitt Romney as being a member of the radical right.

"Republicans will some day have a majority," Tafel predicted, "and we will have a Republican president again. We can't keep hoping we are only going to be protected during those years of a Democratic reign, and if a Republican comes in, we are victims again to this terrible onslaught." ▼

call an attempted homicide/hate crime.

Victor Rohana, 24, has had two major surgeries — including one to remove his irreparably damaged spleen — following the incident.

Police are seeking two white male suspects who were driving a white Suzuki Samurai jeep during the attack, which took place about 10 p.m. as Rohana and Stephen Damron were returning from dinner at Heartland Cafe on Market Street.

"We were walking up from Heartland Cafe to my car on Waller Street," Damron told the Bay Area Reporter. At the intersections where Octavia, Market, and Waller Streets meet, the couple encountered the men in the Subaru, who had the car radio blasting.

According to Damron, one of the men in the car asked the couple why they were holding hands and began taunting them.

"Victor turned around and began walking up the hill. The jeep backed up on Market Street by the Libertarian bookstore on the corner, pulled into a driveway on Waller, turned around, and began driving down the sidewalk," Damron said.

Victor Rohana

According to a police report of the incident, Rohana's path was blocked by the car and he was pinned against the wall, as the passenger in the Suzuki pulled out what police believe is a 9 mm automatic pistol and shot the young man. The assailants then drove down the hill and turned onto Market Street.

Damron told the Bay Area Reporter that when the couple first saw the jeep he had the sense that the assailants "wanted to make fun of gays," but didn't fully realize the seriousness of the situation until Rohana was shot.

"This is a totally outrageous act that is totally unacceptable in San Francisco and anywhere else in civilized society," Jordan said at an October 31 press conference announcing the reward.

The vehicle driven by the assailants in the attempted murder was identified as "a silver- or black-topped 1989-90" model Suzuki Samurai. Chief of Police Anthony Ribera said at the press conference.

"This is a particularly grave and reprehensible incident," said Lester Olmstead Rose, Community United Against Violence executive director. "Mayor Jordan and Chief Ribera are to be commended for responding immediately with the message that this type of violence will not be tolerated."

Olmstead Rose said that gay and lesbian people in San Francisco are the targets of hate violence every day, and that the agency had reports of 366 reports of anti-gay attacks last year. One quarter of the incidents were physical assaults.

"This type of attack is not only against Rohana, it is also an attack against the entire community. The purpose of this kind of violence is to push us back into the closet. We cannot and must not and will not do that," Olmstead Rose told the Bay Area Reporter. ▼

Outrage Mounts Over KRON's Inflammatory Rhetoric

by Dennis Conklin

Mayor Frank Jordan's lesbian and gay liaison and several local lesbian and gay leaders have flatly denounced a question by a local television news reporter about the October 28 attempted murder of Victor Rohana as "inflammatory and homophobic."

Jordan aide Robert Oakes said that KRON-TV news reporter Tia O'Brien was "irresponsible and outrageous" when she asked Jordan and Chief of Police Anthony Ribera at a press conference whether heterosexuals flocking to the Castro for Halloween should fear "retaliation" by angry gays and lesbians.

"It's totally out of line," Oakes said. "It reveals the tremendous prejudice against the lesbian and gay community that exists out there. To assume that gay and lesbians would want to inflict violence on straight people because of such a tragic hate crime is ignorant."

Oakes said that such "sensationalistic and inflammatory" questions perpetuate the very anti-gay stereotypes they reflect.

"They portray us as a community out of control, and that myth inhibits our ability to make substantive gains on civil rights," Oakes said.

Gay and Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation executive director Tom Di Maria called the KRON-TV reporter's question "defamatory by nature."

"The question is parallel to asking a woman who's been raped if women are going to retaliate against all men. Putting the blame on the victim has never been a constructive approach to solving social problems. The question insults the countless lesbians and gay men who have been assaulted verbally and physically in this city," Di Maria said.

The incident is the latest in a rocky state of affairs between the station and the lesbian and gay community. That relationship has been, as Di Maria said, "problematic" for several years, because of such KRON stories as its notorious sweeps-week tabloid-style feature on NAMBLA and a controversial and sensationalized series called "Sexual Suicide" on the sex practices and venues of high AIDS risk younger gay men in San Francisco.

"Does this type of hate crime cause KRON to examine its own defamatory media practices, or look at the way gays are traditionally stereotyped and defamed in the media?" Di Maria said.

Di Maria laid the blame for much of the violence directed at lesbians and gays at media portrayals of the community.

"When asking a question about gay hate crimes, a news reporter must at least be cognizant of the fact that the media is largely to blame for society's negative and stereotypical perspective about our community," he said. "Frankly, if people in the lesbian and gay community were going to retaliate, someone would have shot Jesse Helms by now. We're not a violent community."

Supervisor Carole Migden said the pressing question was whether anti-gay elements would think it's "open season" on lesbians and gays.

At the October 31 board of supervisors meeting, Migden and Supervisor Susan Leal introduced a resolution denouncing the crime.

"It's frightening and serious and it feels like the lid has been blown off. I'm deeply concerned," Migden said. "We call upon the public to be aware of the very serious threat to the safety of lesbians and gay men presented by the perpetrators of these kinds of hate crimes."

Leal called the attempted murder "an attack on our entire community and people of conscience in San Francisco."

"We have the right to walk down San Francisco streets without worrying about senseless acts of violence," Leal said.

And media concerns about retaliation are unwarranted, according to Stephen Damron, Rohana's boyfriend. "There is not going to be retaliation. That's a poor question. This isn't about fighting," Damron said.

"Guns are not the answer. Talking is the answer when there are differences between people." ▼

CUAV Offers Classes on Safety

Virtually every candidate in America acknowledges what virtually every voter already knows: crime is foremost in the minds of the electorate this year. And last Friday's apparently hate-motivated attack on a San Francisco gay couple, which culminated in the near-fatal shooting of said the weapon had been taken in a burglary in Martinez.

Another man identified as Eli Kramer, 27, of Third Street, San Francisco, had a .10 mm Smith and Wesson fully-loaded automatic in his possession, Santos said.

A juvenile was detained after he brandished a baseball bat and a machete, Santos added.

A police radio car had its windshield broken out and officers donned helmets, took up batons, and used a loud hailer to clear the streets when they were pelted with bottles after 2 a.m., as they attempted to permit street sweepers to proceed with cleaning the area. Santos, who was on the scene, said officers remained polite and did their job.

"We got no crap from the [Castro area] residents or the merchants," he said.

Santos said the event attracted a far bigger crowd than in previous years. "Between 11 p.m. and midnight it was mellow, with festive types," he told the B.A.R. But as it got later, the trouble began. "At 1 a.m. when it was supposed to end, it was like nothing happened."

At 2:10 a.m. there were still an estimated 15,000 people on the streets, Santos said. It took police about an hour to clear the streets and restore order.

"I put three squads on line and I personally took up a bull-horn," Santos said.

About 250 officers were tied up for the celebration during the course of the night, although the looming newspaper strike downtown caused a strain on manpower.

Michael Bailey, also known as "Sister Olive O'Suddin," answered questions from the B.A.R. in his capacity as executive producer of Halloween in the Castro 1994.

He praised the Lesbian Avengers for doing "an incredible security job," and called their efforts "tireless, great and flawless."

"I can't praise them enough," he said. They were on the job from 5:30 p.m. to 1:30 a.m., and were "always pleasant."

Bailey also spoke well of the police, saying they were "working very hard."

CUAV provided roving security and medical support, Bailey said. "Their medical team was there all night and they were great."

But, Bailey said, at about 9:30 p.m., CUAV's program director Terry Person asked to meet with him, and told him that all but ten of the volunteer safety monitors "felt unsafe" doing that job and had pulled out. "They decided they didn't want to do it," Bailey explained. Person was not available for comment on Tuesday at press deadline.

Ten CUAV volunteers remained, and they were added to the emergency medical team, Bailey said.

CUAV was to receive one-fourth of the proceeds from the Halloween celebration, Bailey said, "in trade for organizing their security volunteers."

"All of our volunteers were exhausted," Bailey said. "I feel CUAV failed to meet the original plan for Halloween night, and we are in the process of working with CUAV to figure out what went wrong and how to fix it."

"In the past CUAV has been great and had plenty of volunteers. This is the first year we've had a problem of this kind," Bailey said.

Captain Santos explained the importance of volunteer civilian safety monitors, such as those normally provided by CUAV: "What happens is that we [the police] are there as their backup. If they can't handle it then we move in to take care of it. This keeps the cops from being the bad guys. Let the monitors say they have a problem and we come in."

Olmstead-Rose said there was a lower turnout of volunteers than usual this year. "There were many fewer than in year's past," he noted. He was not certain why "people aren't really comfortable doing work as volunteer safety monitors," but he speculated it might deal with personal safety.

He said the Halloween party was getting "crazy" in the Castro.

"It's less and less of a fun community event and more and more of other people coming in to gawk. There was not adequate volunteer safety monitoring last night," he said.

Asked whether CUAV would still anticipate one fourth of the revenues from the event, he said, "I hope so."

Under traditional agreement, the Sisters of Perpetual Indulgence would get a quarter of the proceeds, the Gay Men's Chorus would receive a quarter, and CUAV would receive a quarter. The remainder would be disbursed as grants to various other non-profit community groups.

Olmstead-Rose said, "What happens in the Castro on Halloween is a community issue."

"We do the best we can," he added. ▼

one of the gay men, is probably going to heighten the gay community's concern about violence.

Simply voting for politicians and ballot measures that promise to cut crime is not enough for lesbians and gays who want to protect themselves, according to Community United Against Violence (CUAV). "One sure way to reduce the threat of violence is to learn how to defend yourself," says Terry Person, CUAV's program director. To make that easier, Person told the Bay Area Reporter, CUAV will offer low-cost monthly self-defense classes in those skills.

The next scheduled session will be held Saturday, November 12 from 11:45 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the Akido Arts Center, located at 670 Van Ness Avenue in the city.

The instructor for the six-hour session will be JoAnn Strang, who runs a woman's martial arts school in the East Bay known as Laurel Jujitsu.

The CUAV-sponsored self-defense class will provide instruction for men and women, Person says. Classes will be held once a month, except for December, due to the holidays.

It is not necessary to be in great shape, Person added. Strang will work with everyone. "You don't have to be an athlete. It's about self-defense. It's not about kicking ass. It would enable a person to get out of a tight situation and counter physical attacks," Person said in a brief interview with the B.A.R.

Tuition for the class is on a sliding scale, from $35 to $55, Person said. ▼

Tribute to Murdered German Gays and Lesbians Planned for Next Week

by Kent Brandley

Some of Nazi Germany's forgotten victims will be remembered next Wednesday, November 9, at San Francisco's Congregation Sha'ar Zahav synagogue.

The event will mark the 56th anniversary of Kristallnacht - The Night of Shattered Glass - in conjunction with the Holocaust Center of Northern California. As part of the remembrance, a film and lecture on the Nazi's persecution of homosexuals will be offered from 7 to 9 p.m. at the synagogue, located at 220 Danvers Street (at Casselli) in the city.

Congregation Sha'ar Zahav is a 600-member progressive Reform synagogue with a special outreach to the gay and lesbian community.

Dr. Gunther Grau, a professor at Humboldt University in Berlin and one of the world's leading authorities on the experience of homosexuals in Nazi Germany, will speak, according to Steven Rudnick, acting director of the Holocaust Center.

The film, We Were Marked With a Big 'A', was shown recently at the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum in Washington, D.C. and offers a unique opportunity to learn the little-known tragedy of Hitler's gay victims.

Highlights of the film, Rudnick said, include rare interviews with men who were imprisoned in Nazi concentration camps for homosexuality, and the return of a camp survivor to visit the site of his imprisonment (where the museum curator denies any knowledge of homosexuals having been interned there).

Dr. Gunther Grau

Germany. He will speak on "Persecution, 'Re-education,' or Eradication: The Nazi Campaign Against Homosexuals," Rudnick said.

Grau will draw upon his study of archival materials only available since the fall of the East German government. The documents were until recently in the hands of the Stasi, the East German secret police, Rudnick indicated.

The Holocaust Center of Northern California is a non-profit education and research institute in San Francisco, which promotes remembrance of and education about the Holocaust, Rudnick explained. ▼

Coming (Out) Soon To a Theatre Near You

by Dennis Conkin

First it was a riot, then a 25th anniversary march (replete with marketing mania that included pink triangle candles and Pride water tumblers), and now, inevitably, it's a movie.

Stonewall, a 90-minute British Broadcasting Company feature with a $2 million budget, began production in New York City and Philadelphia last week.

Scheduled for international theatrical release, the production is based on Stonewall, a book by gay author Martin Duberman, and is a semi-fictional account of the lives of six gay New Yorkers in the weeks leading up to the riots.

The film's producer is Christine Vachon (Go Fish, Poison, Safe, Swoon, Postcards From America) and the director is Nigel Finch (The Lost Language Of Cranes, The Vampire: A Soap Opera).

"This is a feel-good movie with a very powerful message and the potential to educate millions of people - gay and straight - about the circumstances that led up to the Stonewall riot," Vachon said in a press statement.

One of the biggest challenges of the film will be to recreate New York as it looked 25 years ago. The entire Sheridan Square area of Greenwich Village (where the Stonewall Inn is located) will be recreated as it appeared a quarter century ago - but in another part of the city. ▼

Out of This World

by Al Kleiwaser

The October 23 edition of This World – a Sunday supplement to the San Francisco Chronicle – is billed as a “voter handbook for election '94.” The 20-page guide examines key election issues, including the race for California's next superintendent of public instruction. In her analysis of candidates Delaine Eastin and Maureen DiMarco, Chronicle reporter Nanette Asimov completely ignores the lesbian/gay angle.

As any reporter covering the education beat should know, California is the site for a major struggle over lesbian/gay content in the public school curriculum. The new superintendent of public instruction will have the opportunity to stand up to the State's homophobic board of education and demand the fair and accurate inclusion of lesbian and gay issues in school textbooks (an effort that only Eastin has pledged to undertake seriously). Asimov could have – but did not – report how the candidate's viewed homophobic sections of the California Education Code, which actually require textbooks to “teach honor and respect for monogamous, heterosexual marriage.”

Nanette Asimov does report: “Unlike political contests with clear-cut party lines and issues, the nonpartisan superintendent's race is a muddy, heated battle that requires – as with most school matters – some study.” Unfortunately, she apparently didn't fully follow her own advice.

Educational equity issues are extraordinarily important to lesbian and gay voters, who intimately recognize the role that public education could play in combating homophobia before it takes hold and rots the minds of another generation of children. The Chronicle certainly missed the mark by failing to raise the issue in its “voter handbook.”

Direct complaints to the attention of Ken Coner, Editor, and Nanette Asimov, Reporter, This World, San Francisco Chronicle, 901 Mission Street, San Francisco, CA 94103, tel. 415-777-1111

Some Humanity on Wall Street

“I'm just calling to tell you I'm thinking about you and praying for you.” So said Bill Clinton in a call to Pedro Zamora, the twenty-something gay AIDS activist who recently achieved international celebrity as a cast member on MTV's The Real World. Significantly, the President's call is mentioned as part of a front-page tribute to Zamora in the October 21 issue of The Wall Street Journal (Western Edition). Zamora is currently hospitalized for an AIDS-related neurological disease for which there is “no proven treatment” and he is “now gravely ill.”

Staff reporter Eric Morgenthau first wrote about Zamora in another front-page Journal article in 1991 and, he says, they have since become close friends. The article reflects that friendship, and also includes comments from the many lives – famous and obscure – that have been touched by Zamora's public battle with AIDS.

For example, Morgenthau quotes a young South Carolina woman who wrote to Zamora: “I never thought anyone could change my opinion on homosexuals and AIDS. Because of you, I've seen the human side of something that once seemed so unreal to me.” Also quoted is a 22-year-old gay man from North Carolina, who never met Zamora but wrote him to say: “Please know this, if you never helped one other person, if you never made a difference in anyone's life, you made all the difference in mine.”

It's refreshing to see an above-the-fold article whose frank subjectivity provides a uniquely humane and honest example of mainstream reporting on AIDS and gayness. Send feedback to Paul E. Steiger, Managing Editor, and Eric Morgenthau, Reporter, The Wall Street Journal, 200 Liberty Street, New York, NY 10281, tel. 212-416-2000.

Another Good Dateline

NBC's news-magazine show, Dateline, has once again provided good coverage of a significant lesbian/gay news item. The program's October 21 episode included the segment “Family Feud,” produced by Joe Decola. The segment covered the custody case being fought by Sharon Bottoms, a lesbian mother whose son Tyler was taken away from her by the Virginia courts. Sharon was accused of engaging in “oral sex” (a felony in Virginia) and “open displays of affection.”

The Dateline segment allowed ample time for Sharon and her lover April to make the case for their fitness as parents. Sharon's mother – who filed for custody of Tyler on the grounds that her daughter is a lesbian – came across as the moron she is. For example, when pressed to explain just how, exactly, Tyler would suffer from living with his lesbian mom, all Sharon's mother could say was: “Tyler will be messed up.”

Significantly, Dateline did not drag out any hysterical, Bible-thumping homophobes to condemn all lesbians to hell. Instead, a university researcher – and actual expert! – was interviewed. University of Virginia psychology professor Charlotte Patterson explained that, after an exhaustive review of the research literature, she could not find a single shred of evidence to support the homophobic notion that lesbian parents are harmful to a child's development and welfare.

Encourage Dateline to continue reporting fairly and accurately on lesbian and gay subjects. Send compliments to Joe Decola, Dateline, NBC News, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York NY 10021, tel. 212-664-4444.

We must confront the media's homophobia in order to cure it! To notify the Gay & Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation of any defamatory or affirmative media coverage call our 24-hour Media Watch Hotline at 415-861-4588, or write to GLAAD/SFBA, 1360 Mission Street, Suite 200, San Francisco, CA 94103; fax, 415-861-4893; e-mail glaad_sfba@aol.com.

OBITUARIES

Kenneth J. Garcia

July 26, 1964 - Oct. 9, 1994

Ken, 30, of Ventura, Calif., passed away at the Ventura County Medical Center on Sunday, October 9, of AIDS complications.

Ken was born in Santa Paula, Calif., and graduated from Santa Paula Union High in 1982. He attended Ventura College and was an air cargo specialist in the U.S. Air Force.

Ken is survived by his mother and stepfather, Hilda and William Muller; father and stepmother, Pete and Emma Garcia; sister and brother-in-law, Arleen and Gino Garcia; brother and sister-in-law, Randy and Lisa Garcia; brother, Steve Garcia; maternal grandmother, Maria G. Sanchez; and numerous other relatives.

Ken moved into Christopher House the day it opened, June 27, 1994, and was very happy there. We gratefully acknowledge Tim Rawle, Kathy Powell, Ed King-Ellison and the wonderful staff and volunteers at Christopher House for their loving, compassionate care.

At Ken's request, in lieu of flowers, donations may be made to Christopher House, 856 East Thompson Blvd., Ventura, CA 93001. Ken will be forever in our hearts and dearly missed by all who knew him. ▽

Jim Villeux

Feb. 2, 1950 - Oct. 8, 1994

Jim died October 8 of AIDS complications. He was born in Lewiston, Maine, and lived there through his teenage years.

After serving in the United States Navy in the '70s, Jim moved to California, where he started his career in banking at the Crocker National Bank. He finished his professional career when he retired from the Castro Street Branch of California Federal in 1992.

For the last 10 years, Jim lived in San Francisco, where he was a long-time member of and for a time the business manager at the Metropolitan Community Church/SF. He enjoyed country western dancing with the Saddle Tramps and at the Rawhide II. Recently Jim had volunteered as a driver for Project Open Hand and as a clerk at Under One Roof.

Jim is survived by his daughters, Nicole and Monique, and their mother, Rocio. A sincere thank you to Pamela Ortel of Kaiser Hospice Services for her kind, professional care which enabled Jim to live his last days at home.

At his request, Jim's ashes were scattered outside the Golden Gate Bridge during a private service October 21. Any donations in his name are requested to go to Project Open Hand. ▽

Michael J. Farmer

April 20, 1962 - Oct. 22, 1994

As dusk settled in so did Mike's fight come to an end. He leaves a legacy of a rich, full life filled with love, compassion, humor and bitchiness.

Born and raised in LA, Mike moved to "Oz" five years ago, and found peace, acceptance and a true home. Mike's passions were traveling, music, computers and AMC.

Mike is survived by his mother, Charlene; father, Malcolm; sisters, Debbie and Mooshy; nephew, PJ; goddaughter, Sharia; and longtime friends, Kathy, Bowdy, Jeff and Ken.

Michael's two passions were his children (his cats Calvin and Sophie) and the Golden Gate Guards. His greatest personal achievements came in caring for his brothers in the GGG and in trying to build a better leather/levi community for all of us to enjoy.

Mike wished to publicly thank Mr. Dale Suess for his tireless devotion; his doctor, Ms. Teresa Black, for her love; and Nurse Abby with Visiting Nurses. A memorial is planned for a later date. Good-bye, my friend; be pain free and soar with the angels till we meet again. ▽

Terry Leftrook

March 12, 1948 - Oct. 24, 1994

Terry Leftrook passed away October 24 at Davies Medical Center

after a long fight with AIDS. Before his illness, Terry became an institution in the Castro; Herb Caen described how Terry stopped traffic wherever he went in his open-top Alfa Romeo with his pet bird, Oliver, on his shoulder. Handsome and tailored to a fault, he somehow still managed to wear too much jewelry, turning heads wherever he went.

A brilliant designer, Terry produced stunning artwork, sculpture and furniture for clients around the country. A partner in Trillium Graphics, he did incredible work with the Smithsonian, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Metropolitan Opera, and other museums and opera associations in the USA and Canada. His passions included classical music, cooking and entertaining, and travel to the art capitals of Europe.

This classy, sexy, spiritual guy will be missed by Al and Nancy Leftrook, Ruth Tauber, his church family and a close circle of friends. His memorial service was held last Thursday, October 27, at the Church of the Covenant. ▽

Rick Maricich

May 17, 1959 - Oct. 27, 1994

Rick, 35, died at high noon after an amazing struggle against AIDS.

Those who knew him will remember a wonderful person who was so sweet and kind.

Rick was born in Concord and moved to the city to be with me in 1993. We spent 11 wonderful years together, years that I will cherish till the end of time.

Living on past Rick's death are his parents, Pat and Marianne; sister, Jeannie; grandma, Edith; her husband, Pete; sister-in-law, Lulu; her husband, Paul; numerous other relatives and friends; lover, Bob; and Tanya and Kitty.

Rick would like to thank Dr. Marge Poscher, who did so much to help him weather the storms and enjoy the sunlight. Also his nurses, Nancy and John; all the wonderful staff at Quest (thank you, Laura); Dr. Marc Conant and Mark Illeman; all his friends at the Conant Medical Group; the absolutely wonderful staff at Mt. Zion Hospital; and all the others who helped him live life to the fullest up until the very end.

As was his wish, Rick died quickly and at home. Good-bye, Honey Poo-Poo; I love you very much. ▽

Keith Robert Elliott

April 10, 1952 - Oct. 19, 1994

Keith Elliott ended his six-year battle with AIDS on the afternoon of October 19 at his apartment in Hoboken, N.J., in the company of his mother, Virginia; boyfriend, Tom; and close friend, Regina.

Raised in the Bay Area, Keith moved to New York in 1979, where he studied at the Parsons School of Design. His first job after graduation was as chief production designer of the Vietnam War Memorial in New York City. In 1986 he was accepted into the graduate program in architecture at Harvard University, where he studied until his illness forced him to quit.

During the following years, Keith devoted himself to work on his apartment and the homes of friends. When he decided to discontinue his medications a few weeks ago, he invited his entire family and as many friends as his apartment would hold to join him in a party which lasted irregularly almost until the day he died.

He is survived by his parents, Robert and Virginia Elliott of El Cerrito; his brother, Julian Clift; his sister, Jamie Elliott-Slusarz; his sister, Anne Marie of Los Angeles; and his enormous extended family of friends around the world. ▽

Edward Medina Guerrero

Sept. 30, 1958 - Oct. 11, 1994

Daddy - a leader. When we couldn't find the answer, you were there to tell and show us how. A man - a gentle man - your strong hand holding ours. A lesson to each of us left behind to find the love and compassion, the beauty of living life as you did, oh so eloquently!

Edward was the founding member, president emeritus of the Knights of Malta, Cable Car Chapter, San Francisco. He's within each of us every time we face a trial and smile and overcome our fears. We live, and so does the legacy of a leader.

Edward Medina Guerrero was born in Fresno, California. He leaves in his wake his father, Edward; mother, Sylvia; brother, Roderick; and his beloved husband/boy/wife, Scott Karnuth; to live onward, embrace each day, and become "good at life."

A memorial service will be held November 5 at 3:30 p.m. at the Unitarian Church, 1187 Franklin Street, San Francisco. Donations can be made on Ed's behalf to the UCSF Gift Administration Dept., 44 Montgomery St., Ste. 285, San Francisco, CA 94104. Please specify your donation is for AIDS research. ▽

Rick Schraishuhn

June 25, 1950 - Oct. 5, 1994

October 5 marked the departure of another familiar member of the San Francisco community. Rick was an individual of great charm and noble purpose. His smile was memorable; his manner, sincere; he was a gentleman.

Born in Toledo, Ohio; educated in Ann Arbor, Michigan; Bay Area resident since 1976; and an architect for more than 15 years, Rick came to be regarded as a leader in his professional specialty of health facility planning. He enjoyed an immensely rewarding career, working for large companies and eventually in his own practice.

Rick's lifestyle reflected the special nature of his time and place. With friends and community Rick shared passionate dreams, burgeoning hopes and ambitious plans. He embraced powerful ideals to guide his lifelong quests for love and truth. In the end, his legacy is one woven of diverse accomplishment, quiet emotion and profound destiny.

Rick is survived by his mother, Nancy, who lives in Santa Rosa. A memorial gathering was held on October 28 in Sonoma County for friends of Rick. A San Francisco memorial is being planned. For information call (707) 829-3391. ▽

Charles S. Buel

Composer and artist Charles S. Buel has passed out of the lives of his friends, family, and colleagues.

Supported by his family in his early education, Charles developed a strong intelligence and individuality, and read much history. He was often fiercely outspoken, but equally often sympathetic.

Energetic and generous, he was a talented artist in drawing and collage as well as a composer with a unique, personal style that went from funky keyboard to a beautiful lyric sax solo. He often wrote his lyrics. He did occasional carpentry.

For five years Charles was a member of the Independent Composers Association of L.A. He later moved here and became a valued president of the Society of Gay and Lesbian Composers, performing his music in every concert since 1991, transporting his huge amount of equipment by truck.

Charles set track team records at Hillsdale High School. He is survived by his mother, Hilda, and two sisters, Paula and Jane Buel Stewart. At his request, no services will be held. The family suggests contributions to the AIDS Program of San Mateo County, 1700 Edison St. 94403, for their great help and support. ▽

Jeff Perham

Feb. 14, 1961 - Oct. 19, 1994

After a courageous, proud battle of three years against AIDS, Jeff passed away at Kaiser Hospital on October 19. If life is a journey and its purpose to create love and to achieve growth, then Jeff's life was exceptionally rich, albeit too brief.

Jeff is survived by his partner-in-life of 13 years, Larry Stebbins; his parents, Toni and Bob Pyatt; brothers, Bob and Steve Perham; and their respective families.

Jeff was a successful real estate agent associated with Herth Real Estate for the past five years. Jeff dedicated himself to his clients, who were well-served by his professionalism and commitment.

Jeff was a dedicated volunteer at Shanti Project and could be seen on Ward 5A of SF General delivering Christmas trees he had purchased to patients.

A memorial service will be held to celebrate Jeff's life at the Stern Grove Club House at Sloat and 19th Ave. on November 7 at 7 p.m. Friends may wish to make a donation in Jeff's name to either the Godfather Service Fund at 584 Castro St. Suite 225 or Coming Home Hospice, c/o VNH, 1390 Market St. Suite 510, SF, CA 94102.

Three lifetimes, my Valentine. ▼

Donaldo V. Batayola

1961 - 1994

Early on the morning of October 4, we lost our dear friend Donaldo.

After a harrowing three-year battle with AIDS, he had had enough. The weather might have given us a clue: it was a cold, windy, wet day punctuated with sharp lightning and thunder. In the final months of Donaldo's illness, he was cared for with great love and dignity by his parents, sister, nine brothers and many good friends. Don is survived by his best boy, his Scottie dog Coco Chanel. We all love him and will miss him very much!

Donaldo came to San Francisco from Seattle and worked for many years at Gump's. How appropriate. He was a man of great taste; he insisted upon the finest life had to offer, not only for himself but also for his many friends. Don enjoyed fine food, camping at the Russian River, weekly trips to the Flower Mart and his many shopping expeditions.

On November 12 at 11 a.m., a memorial service will be held at the AIDS Memorial Grove in Golden Gate Park. A reception and celebration of Donaldo's life will follow. For details, please call 285-5640. ▼

Rick Cuevas

Feb. 3, 1939 - Oct. 13, 1994

Rick Cuevas died recently from AIDS complications and is probably shrieking from the other side now that his true age has been published.

A well-known figure in the San Francisco gay deaf community, Rick was a former president of the SF Club for the Deaf and a member of the Rainbow Deaf Society. Fiercely independent, he had a long career as an upholsterer before his declining health forced him to retire.

His nickname, "Tempest Storm," was a metaphor for both his love of burlesque and his fiery Latin temperament. Meeting the real "Tempest" was one of the high points of his life.

One of 15 children, Rick is survived by his "sister-niece," Chris; his sisters, Sherry, Peg, Rita, Cecelia, Mary, Marge, Grace and Delores; his brothers, Victor, Paul and Robert; close friends, Sam, Jim and Dick; former lover, Bruce; and by a host of others whose Sunday afternoons just won't be the same.

A memorial potluck in celebration of his life will be held on Saturday, November 19, at the SF Club for the Deaf, 530 Valencia (between 15th and 17th) at 1 p.m. Please join us. ▼

Jeffrey Kent White

June 19, 1963 - Oct. 20, 1994

Jeff died at his home October 20 at 9:20 p.m. of AIDS. He was surrounded by his parents, sister, companion, friend Elaine and his dog Garbo.

Jeff's life and career were as multifaceted as he was. He worked for many years with Red Lobster Restaurants. "Fed up" with the restaurant industry, he switched to the ever-demanding retail management field. His move to San Francisco ten years ago brought him to the city he loved and to work he excelled at. Jeff used his unique abilities in merchandising and wonderful interpersonal skills to become a very successful, well-respected retail store manager with Marshalls, then Miller's Outpost and finally, Kids R Us.

A celebration of Jeff's life was held at Sullivan's Mortuary, San Francisco, October 23. A graveside service will be held at Sawnee View Cemetery, Cumming, Georgia, at 2 p.m. on November 5. Jeff's remains will be interred there next to his older brother, Michael.

Jeff is survived by his parents, Orien L. and Patsy White; grandfather, Woford B. White; sister and brother-in-law, Karen and George White Howell; and his caregiver and companion of two years, David Smith. ▼

Stephen Fisk Lowell

May 11, 1941 - May 20, 1993

Steve Lowell, 52, co-founder of Paperback Traffic Bookstores in San Francisco, has died at Ojai, California, of AIDS.

Born of a pioneer family in Fresno, California, he graduated from UC Berkeley. He was active in the Gay Liberation Movement before opening the West's first predominantly gay bookstore on Castro Street in 1972 with Donn Tatum.

Finding politics inadequate, Steve became a student of the Tibetan Buddhist meditation master Chogyam Trungpa, Rinpoche, helping found the San Francisco Dharmadhatu meditation center. He continued practicing and teaching the buddhadharma until his death.

Steve moved to Los Angeles in 1982 to study interior design at UCLA and worked in that field, including at Columbia Pictures. After being diagnosed he served on the Spiritual Advisory Council of AIDS Project Los Angeles and did hospice and prison work for PWAs.

Steve moved to Ojai in 1993 to be given care by his Buddhist friends there. His death was essentially peaceful, and he was able to maintain his meditation practice, which is very auspicious. His ashes were taken to the Rocky Mountain Dharma Center in Colorado.

He is survived by his longtime lover, Donn Tatum of Ojai, and brother, Jeffrey Lowell of Oakland. ▼

Frederick "Rick" Thorpe

July 31, 1948 - Oct. 12, 1994

Rick passed away in Port Richey, Florida, in the early morning of October 12 in the arms of his life-long companion, Joe Catania. Also present were his sister, Tina, and loving friend, Patrick Leary.

Always one to put a smile on your face, Rick was a master chef, photographer, "jack of all trades" and a true trouper to the very end, even in the face of intense adversity.

Rick lived to achieve his and Joe's dreams of building a successful restaurant and beautiful home together, and was very proud of their accomplishments.

Rick is survived by his sister and his brother, Leonard, both of the Los Angeles area. He is predeceased by his mother, Betty Thorpe.

Contributions may be made to the Elizabeth Taylor AIDS Foundation (ETAF), P.O. Box 17160, Los Angeles, CA 90017. ▼

Jon Cabanatan (a.k.a. Sasha Blue)

Nov. 21, 1966 - Oct. 1, 1994

Jon left us for the glamour capital of the universe - heaven - with a smile on his beautiful face on the evening of October 1.

Jon was famous for his flawless impersonations of Whitney Houston and Diana Ross, and, of course, for his ultra-glamorous alter ego, Sasha Blue.

A memorial was held for Jon October 12. In attendance were his brother and sister from Hawaii as well as numerous friends. Thanks to David, Freddy, Doug, etc. for their support. Thanks to everyone at Coming Home Hospice, where Jon resided the last months of his life. Donations can be made to Coming Home in the name of Jon. Rest in peace and glamour, sweet angel; you are sorely missed. - Your friend ▼

Tom Wile

March 11, 1944 - Oct. 20, 1994

An avid SF FrontRunner, reader and Francophile, Tom died of AIDS Oct. 20. Many thanks to the wonderful staff of the Maitri AIDS Hospice and SF General OP Clinic, as well as to the Visiting Nurse Association, especially Bob, Deva and Daphne. ▼

Victor Jensen

Victor was a very good friend to a lot of people. He is especially remembered by his many friends at the Gangway and Old Rick's Gold Room. Victor was well-known for the many delicious parties that he catered so beautifully. God bless you, Victor, and rest in peace. - from the people who loved you ▼

Timothy Darfler

After a courageous battle with AIDS, Tim left us on October 22. We will deeply miss his gentle nature, creativity, humor and spirituality with which he enriched all our lives. We are grateful Tim could stay in his home until the last few days in the hospital where he was surrounded by the love of his family and friends. Supporting Tim in his journey were his partner, Rudolf Haeny; his parents, Betty and Curt Darfler; his siblings, Stephen Darfler, Mark Darfler and Amy Hubbard; and their families. ▼

After a year-long fight with AIDS-related lymphoma, Dick died

Wednesday evening, October 26.

Born and raised in Toronto and Vancouver, Canada, Dick made San Francisco home in 1976. His love of life, generosity and steadfast friendship will be missed always.

Many thanks to Wards 5A and 86, and for services from Visiting Nurses and Hospice for friends and family. A memorial will be held November 13 at 324 Castro Street at 2 p.m. For information call 621-1733. ▼

Quan Yin Sponsors Beijing HIV Conference Update

by Kent Brandley

Gay men are increasingly visible in mainland China, according to Misha Cohen, Oriental Medical Doctor (OMD), who just returned to San Francisco from Beijing this week. Cohen, who has been treating people with HIV since 1982, has made three visits to China in recent years, and says there was evidence of significant change on her most recent visit.

Among other things, she told the B.A.R., "There is a great increase of sexual activity, particularly among young people," and she observed the presence of many more Americans.

Cohen was in Beijing

October 22-27 to attend an international health symposium designed to help integrate Eastern and Western medicines. HIV experts from around the world, including many from the front lines in San Francisco, attended the gathering, she said. The event was co-chaired by Dr. Constance Wofsy of the University of California, San Francisco.

The program in China was produced under the auspices of the People to People Citizen Ambassador Program, as part of a concerted worldwide campaign to bring Chinese medicine to HIV patients. It evolved out of the effort "to marry the successful techniques of the East with those currently being practiced by physicians in the West," Cohen said.

The government of mainland China officially says only 1,000 people are HIV-positive in the nation of approximately 1.1 billion, but medical professionals privately say the real figure is closer to 10,000, and the virus is spreading throughout the country. The main mode of transmission in China is through intravenous drug use, Cohen said, and most of the country's HIV-positive people live in the Golden Triangle, where drugs from Burma and Thailand are plentiful. Cohen estimated there are now 1.8 million people with HIV in Thailand.

Quan Yin Healing Arts Center will sponsor an informal briefing on the results of the Beijing symposium next Wednesday, November 9, at 7:30 p.m.

The free event will be held at the center, located at 1748 Market Street. Both Wofsy and Cohen will attend the briefing.

Quan Yin Healing Arts Center, providing health services to clients with HIV for a decade now, is a non-profit organization dedicated to providing natural health care through the practice of Traditional Chinese Medicine. ▼

AIDS Theatre Festival Deadline Approaching

by Kent Brandley

Next Friday, November 11, is the application deadline for the Fifth AIDS Theater Festival, scheduled for production January 30 through February 3, 1995 at Moscone Convention Center.

The annual theater festival will be produced in conjunction with the Seventh Annual National AIDS Update Conference, which is expected to draw 2,500 registrants.

The goal of the festival is to showcase HIV-related theater, performance art, music, and dance by individuals or groups, said Hank Tavera, artistic director of the festival.

"The festival gives performers the national exposure afforded by the conference," Tavera said. "In the past, several individuals and groups have received bookings and made valuable contacts throughout the U. S.

"In establishing this festival in 1989," Tavera said, "we pioneered the idea of presenting AIDS theater and performance art as a powerful and developing genre which can move audiences to reflect, act, and change their attitudes and behavior in regards to the pandemic."

Individuals interested in performing should mail or fax information to Tavera by November 11, including:

- A description of the piece in one or two sentences;
- A contact name and address, plus work and home phone numbers;
- The title of the piece: written, directed, and performed by whom;
- Any other credits: for music, costumes, etc.;
- Technical information, including length in minutes, microphone requirements, use of cassette tape, preferred lighting and props needed, etc.;

- A biography or resume: a short paragraph;
 - A black and white photograph for promotion if available;
 - The full names of all persons who will be involved with the performance (for registration passes to the conference); and
 - First and second choice of performance days, noon hour or evening.
- There is no application fee for persons interested in performing, Tavera indicated. Those selected to perform will be notified on December 16. ▼

Postal Workers Come Out of the Closet

by Kent Brandley

Next year's Gay Pride Parade in San Francisco may feature a contingent from the U. S. Postal Service. It's already happened in Minneapolis, and it's about to happen here.

The San Francisco Bay Area chapter of Gay/Lesbian Postal Employees Network (GLPEN) is in the formative stages, according to Jeff Perez, co-founder with Judy LeValley. The organization welcomes gay, lesbians, bisexuals, and other postal workers who may be straight but not narrow.

Perez says he and LeValley are in the processing of forming the organization here as a branch of the national network, and they welcome support and new members.

Currently there are seven chapters of GLPEN, Perez said. The first, founded in 1992, and still largest, is in Minneapolis. There are others, he said, in Scottsdale, Arizona; Miami, Florida; Boston, Massachusetts;

Penn Run, Pennsylvania - and right in Jesse Helm's backyard in Hamlet, North Carolina.

In San Francisco, about ten people have shown an active interest so far, says Perez, and they are naturally on a mailing list; how else would postal workers prefer to keep in touch? "It's weird," says Perez, that San Francisco has been so slow in getting GLPEN off the ground. But, he says, "Gay rights in the [local] post office is really not mentioned."

Even in San Francisco, he says, there are "a lot of closeted people. The [postal] environment is not conducive to being real open." But that's changing, he hopes.

Membership and participation is strictly confidential, Perez says. Requested anonymity will be respected, he added. ▼

Write Perez or LeValley at GLPEN-SF at P.O. Box 282982, San Francisco, CA., 94128 or call Perez at (415) 873-4308.

PALM SPRINGS, "FAST BECOMING THE HIPPEST DESTINATION ON THE MAP"

By Kevin Thomas

PALM SPRINGS- "It's an odd town in a 1960's time warp with retro-architecture, where women with beehive hairdos still can be seen and shoppers find thrift stores laden with American kitsch."

It's Palm Springs. Well, from the point of view of the Conde' Nast Traveler, a travel magazine. According to the 14-page spread in the September '94 issue, Palm Springs is "fast becoming the hippest destination on the map"

"It's hot... it's back, it's Palm Springs." "a substantial gay community thrives here." Return to Palm Springs for a trip back in time when the American Dream is alive and well. The shopkeepers along Palm Canyon Drive openly welcome us, Thursday night's Villagefest offers an opportunity to gather along Palm Canyon Drive for a weekly street fair, offering some great people watching (cruising). The gay entertainment community has come together to offer you the best selection of activities for a hot desert night. If you haven't been to Palm Springs lately, it's new and exciting.

Voting Queer

by Michael C. Botkin

One can tell by the rising tide of "attack ads" flooding the airwaves that the election is just around the corner. That means that it's time to dig up those Voter Information Pamphlets you got in the mail — you remember them, the size of small telephone directories, on cheap newsprint — and figure out how you're going to vote. In California, this means not only choosing candidates but also deciphering an alphabet's worth of city propositions and a dozen or so more statewide ones. Indeed, democracy nowadays is as fun as it is rewarding.

The interactions of local, regional, and national politics make figuring out a coherent position almost impossible. In Chicago, in my youth, many just went into the booth and pulled the lever marked "Democratic" and walked out, and only obstreperous independents bothered to vote a "split ticket." Such simple days are long gone, and figuring your way through the crowded ballot has become a bewildering chore for anyone who takes the process seriously.

It helps to have a guiding ideology. In the old days Jewish people used to look at any given issue and ask, "But is it good for the Jews?" This can be seen as narrow self-interest, but it had the virtue of giving one a moral compass, as it were. By the same token, I tend to look at candidates and propositions and ask, "Is it good for the queers?"

This consideration resolves a number of the decisions; a consciously queer voter almost has to vote against Governor "Sneaky Pete" Wilson (when the chips were down, even the Log Cabin gay Republicans couldn't bring themselves to endorse him) and in favor of Prop. 186, the universal health-care bill. But what does it tell you about the Feinstein/Huffington race for the Senate, given DiFi's lukewarm support of gay issues and Huffington's willingness to allow gays in the military? And what relevance does it have for all those bond measures?

The list

On all the high-profile conflicts, there are usually enough clues and indicators to make a decision pretty obvious. There's no reason to believe that Huff's nominal stance on gays in the military is anything more than a smokescreen for his generally reactionary attitudes. Although Prop. 187, the anti-immigration law, technically doesn't have anything to do with gays, the victory of such ugly, racist legislation can only encourage the right wing to go after everyone on their hit lists with renewed faith and vigor.

For the less obvious decisions, I fall back on a process I call "my enemy's enemy is my friend" or, more succinctly, the shit list. As I read through the endorsements for this or that candidate or proposition, I keep an eye open for where their support comes from. If they are endorsed by too many of the people on my shit list, I vote the other way. My personal list consists of Quentin Kopp, Mayor Jordan, Bill Maher, Annemarie Conroy, and any member of the notorious and reactionary Fang dynasty. If more than three of these people line up behind a given issue, I can be sure that it's nothing I'd want to support. Everyone will have their own list, but the principle can be applied almost universally.

The ubiquitous "slate cards" endorsing this or that raft of candidates and measures are pretty worthless. Some are complete boondoggles, like the one published by the "Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Voters Project." This is a transparent front group controlled by the Fang dynasty and devoid of any genuine community input. Pathetically, this "gay" slate card declines to endorse two out of three of the gay and lesbian candidates for supervisor! Most of these slate cards can be safely ignored as little more than paid endorsements.

Queer bullets

Using my list, a fairly hardcore queer perspective and common sense, I worked my way through this year's ballot, starting with the candidates, slogging through the city propositions and finishing with the statewide measures. As mentioned above, even the gay Republicans couldn't bring themselves to endorse Wilson, and personally, I'd rather vote for Attila the Hun. The likelihood that Wilson will win, and then run for president in '96, makes voting for Democrat Gray Davis for lieutenant governor all the more important: if Wilson vacates his office to move to the White House, Davis, a moderately pro-gay liberal, will become governor. It's not much of a silver lining, but it might have to do.

The queer agenda tends to support Tony Miller for secretary of state. Although he's hardly been a crusader for gay rights, if he loses it will be only because he's homosexual, which would be pretty depressing. Conversely, hardcore homophobic Attorney General Dan Lungren needs to be turned out; if his opponent Tom Umberg's delightfully vicious attack ad starring Polly Klaas' grandfather can do the trick, so much the better.

The race for state superintendent of schools is another one easily decided on the basis of queer perspective alone: Delaine Eastin supports gay-positive education in the schools, while Wilson appointee DiMarco opposes it. Likewise, Representative Nancy Pelosi has been an outstanding advocate for gay and HIV rights and needs to be re-elected.

Locally, I've decided to cast a "queer bullet" vote in the contest to elect five new supervisors. By voting for only the three openly gay/lesbian candidates — Migden, Ammiano, and Leal — I make each of those votes count more. While some of the others might in fact be worth voting for, the desire for a clear-cut "Lavender Sweep" outweighs my interest in these secondary candidates.

Flagging enthusiasm

Alas, the lower-profile races, like those for the board of education, the college board and the BART board, are murkier. I was horrified to discover an avowed follower of fascistic Lyndon LaRouche running for the board of ed, one Marijo Danielson. Lee Dolson, a candidate for the college board, has the rare distinction of being endorsed by virtually everybody on my shit list. Such dubious candidates are easy to eliminate from consideration, as is James Fang for BART board.

The local propositions are murkier still. I'm against Prop. A (San Bruno Jail Bonds) because I'm against building more prisons. I favor Prop. B (Old Main Library) because I like libraries. I'm against Prop. C (City Hall Improvement Bonds) because I don't think our local legislators deserve anything better than the still quake-damaged hulk they've got. On the other hand, I'll vote for Prop. D (Sewer Revenue Bonds) if only because it's opposed by both Kopp and the local Republican Party.

Prop. H (Domestic Partner Benefits) would, at last, give some retirement benefits to domestic partners of city workers. It's little enough, but its defeat would be a tremendous morale loss for the local gay community. Prop. J would give the Fang dynasty a monopoly on printing city notices, even though they'll only pay about half of what the Examiner has bid. Prop. K, on the other hand, seeks to overturn the garbage collection monopoly currently held by Norcal. I dislike monopolies and will vote accordingly.

The Elections Task Force proposal, L, offers the prospect of district elections for city supervisor, instead of our current "vote for five" approach. Props. M and N are both part of Mayor Jordan's campaign to harass the homeless, which should not be encouraged. Prop. O will tax downtown businesses to subsidize MUNI, an excellent idea.

The state propositions are pretty well-known. Prop. 186 is our last chance for healthcare reform, and Prop. 188 is a "Trojan horse" sponsored by the tobacco industry to overturn local anti-smoking laws.

Despite my flagging enthusiasm for traditional politics, I still think it's important to vote — and to vote queer. Will it lead to liberation? Probably not, but it might derail the looming fast track to fascism implied by such phenomena as Prop. 187, the various "three-strikes" laws proliferating nationwide and the success of Perot-like populists. ▼

Chowchilla Coalition won the release of two other women prisoners, Betty Jo Ross and Joann Walker.

The department of corrections is killing prisoners with AIDS and other major health care problems, Berman said. "The Chronicle article documented the case of Molly Reyes, a prisoner at CCWF, who spent an hour and a half in her cell screaming and vomiting blood before being taken to the hospital where she eventually died.

"All prisoners with terminal illnesses should be granted immediate release from prison so that they can obtain decent medical care in the community."

The coalition also contends that the continued incarceration of dying prisoners is a waste of taxpayers' money. "Prisoners with AIDS need medical care and compassionate release, not wasteful, expensive incarceration," Berman said.

"We challenge the state legislature to generate an early release policy for prisoners who are dying," she concluded. ▼

HIV PREVENTION PLANNING PUBLIC HEARING

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1994
5:30-7:30 PM

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS CHAMBERS, SAN FRANCISCO CITY HALL

The San Francisco HIV Prevention Planning Council will hold a Public Hearing on Thursday, November 10, 1994, from 5:30 to 7:30 PM in the Board of Supervisors Chambers at San Francisco City Hall to seek public comment on its draft 1995 HIV Prevention Plan. Comments received at the hearing will be incorporated into revisions of the draft.

The draft 1995 HIV Prevention Plan presents an epidemiologic profile of HIV and AIDS in San Francisco and identifies currently available prevention resources, target populations, unmet needs, and priority goals and objectives for prevention services. To receive a copy of an Executive Summary of the draft Plan, please contact Tim Wu at the Support Center for Nonprofit Management, (415) 552-7584. Copies of the complete draft Plan are available for inspection during regular office hours in the lobby of the San Francisco Department of Public Health AIDS Office, 25 Van Ness Ave., 5th Floor, San Francisco.

Interested individuals are invited to provide public statements of no more than three (3) minutes at the hearing. Persons who wish to provide public comment but are unable to attend the hearing should send written comments to HIV Prevention Planning Council, c/o Valerie Kegebein, SFDPH AIDS Office, 25 Van Ness Ave., 5th Floor, San Francisco, CA 94102.

To request ASL Interpretation or other linguistic translation services at least 72 hours in advance of the Public Hearing, or for more information, please contact Tim Wu at the Support Center for Nonprofit Management, (415) 552-7584.

WHO OWNS THE LAVENDER SWEEP?

WHO IS ROBERT BARNES?

People hire Robert Barnes to stack political clubs. He can swindle an endorsement. The dirty little secret is that Barnes' minions take over political clubs with a few hundred dollars. The same 250 people exert vast influence on the voters. Of course this lays waste to thousands of hours of real community activism. "Its easy to stack a club" Barnes remarked in 1991, "the hard part is not getting caught-but we have our ways" (with a sly wink). Of course he has been caught several times.

Barnes imaginative new theme "community unity" seems to have caught on. Robert Barnes controls the Alice club, the most manipulated political club in the City, its members slavishly approve the recommendations of its PAC. But to achieve the appearance of "unity", Barnes had to pack the Milk Club too. His opportunity came when the Milk PAC did not endorse Carole Migden in June. Barnes threatened to "personally see that she gets the endorsement", his new memberships simply overwhelmed the active members.

Is the "community unity" touted by Alice merely the efforts of Robert Barnes? Endorsements and membership in political clubs is remarkably similar. Raoul Wallenberg, Harvey Milk, Affordable Housing, Alice, even Chinese American Democratic Club—have many of the same members. Endorsement votes are carefully calculated and counted long before the event and the real decisions are made by a small cadre of people based on who will pay the most for an endorsement. Something is rotten here. Barnes stock reply... "I don't give a shit" may be a clue.

WHO BOUGHT THE LAVENDER SWEEP?

A group of conservative downtown corporate power brokers calling themselves the Committee On Jobs is engaged in a desperate take-over attempt to destroy progressive politics in the City. They have spent a million dollars to co-opt the Lesbian/Gay vote and to bankroll the Lavender Sweep. JOB's strategy is to break the progressive alliance that was the legacy of Harvey Milk. The new Gay/Downtown partnership would devastate small business, labor, neighborhood, tenant and environmental interests—in-terests in which we lesbian/gay/bi-sexual people have vital concerns. JOB's agenda is: more taxes for the middle and lower classes, higher rents, lower wages and reduced downtown taxes. That doesn't sound like Harvey Milk. This new partnership with the Barnes-Migden-Leal gay style politicians and downtown will be seen nationally as a betrayal of unity with our traditional allies, and a warning to be wary of an allegiance with our community. We may need our old allies again someday.

And in case you think JOB's objective is providing jobs, try calling them next time you're unemployed.

SLATECARD WARS? ON CASTRO?

Thought police, including one gay newspaper, the Sentinel, are employed to coerce conformance to the "community unity" slatecard. The Lesbian/Gay/Bisexual Voters Project encountered the wrath of the Sentinel when it announced early-on that it would not endorse the JOB's candidates, gay or to achieve the appearance of "unity"—Barnes had to pack the Milk Club too.

straight. In a malicious article complete with a full front-page misinformation collage, the Voters Project was accused of every crime in the book, including having straight members! They refused the common journalistic practice of allowing a rebuttal or even a letter to the editor refuting their claims.

WHO DICTATES THE GAY PARTY-LINE

The gay political Mafia's demand for unmitigated support from all gay political groups belies the major tenet of our movement: we lesbian/gay/bisexual people wish to be judged by our actions, not for our sexual orientation.

We are more diverse than any other group. Rich and poor, every race and creed/no creed, every political party—"community unity" is a nice concept, and we are united in the fight for our civil rights, but unity stops where personal ambition takes over. It may be that weighing the issues and candidates will advance our interests far more effectively than any servile adherence to Barnes' phony slate. Our community is still a part of the real world. Just being lesbian or gay is not enough anymore.

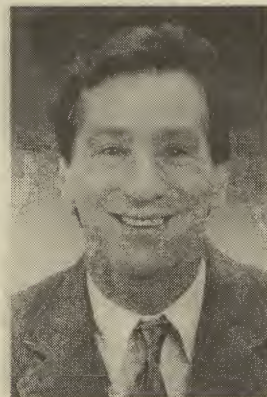

WHO OWNS THE GAY CANDIDATES?

This election has three supervisory candidates from our community. Both incumbents Migden and Leal have been bankrolled by JOBS and both sold us out to the wealthy Olympic Club, with a sweetheart deal that ensures their unrestricted right to discriminate against Lesbian/Gay/Bisexual people in perpetuity. They actively sought support from the downtown corporate power structure whose interests our community has vigorously fought against since our climb out of the closet. Only Tom Ammiano refused JOB's financial support and has committed himself to Harvey Milk's coalition. The voices of small business, renters, minorities, neighborhoods, elderly and the poor need to be heard, and the labor community is at a perilous crossroad. These constituencies can count on Tom Ammiano. But with only 20% of the funds available to incumbents like Migden, his candidacy is endangered.

WHY BULLET VOTE?

This week the Bay Guardian suggested that voters should vote for only one candidate, Ammiano. However, they went on to endorse four others with grave reservation. We feel that corrupted their slate. A drastic step is needed and therefore we recommend a bullet vote. Vote for one lesbian/gay candidate only—Tom Ammiano. Use your other votes to encourage new talent on the Board. Sylvia Courtney and Maria Martinez bring a fresh, progressive perspective. This will not defeat Migden, Leal or Shelley, it does send a clear message assuring a voice for our community and... unity.

Scott O'Hara:
Provocateur
With a Penis

The Power of a Magic Wand

by John F. Karr

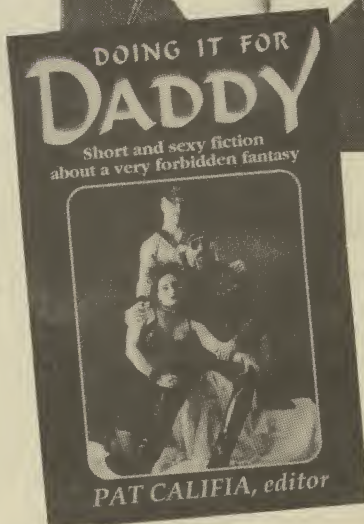

If gay men need proof that they're all size queens, that they not only worship dick but worship the biggest dicks with a devotion as irresistible as it is inexplicable, perhaps they should heed the story of a life lived in thrall of a penis.

This isn't the story of just any penis, but "The Biggest Dick in San Francisco." While even the man possessed of this penis won't deny that it isn't the biggest one in town — although it's close to it — it certainly was the biggest one entered in the Big Dick contest sponsored as a charity event by Savages, the porn house-cum sex club, which in the mid '80s inhabited the spot now known as the Campus Theatre. What with the redoubtable Mr. Marcus as judge, and the B.A.R.'s Ronnettte on hand to render in his richly rococo prose a report of Pulitzerian quidity, the handing down of the judgment was no mere trifle. For the formerly unknown drifter, sometime bathhouse attendant, and uncontrollable exhibitionist named Scott O'Hara, who was then employed by Savages as a weenie-wig-gler, Labor Day weekend 1983 will always be remembered as the time when the enshrinement of his penis opened all doors. That was when public recognition of his big dick made him a star, and provided him with a modicum of riches, a magnum of power, and a life of unending merriment.

'Doing It for Daddy'

by Pat Califia

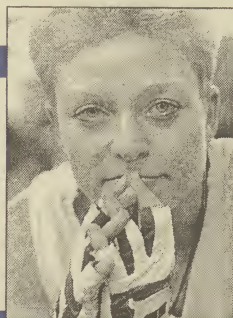

The following is Pat Califia's introduction to her new collection of erotica, Doing It for Daddy: Short and sexy fiction about a very forbidden fantasy. The book features stories by such writers as John Preston, Carol A. Queen, Robin Sweeney, Wendell Ricketts, Pam Parker, Jay Shaffer and Pat Califia. Doing It for Daddy, to be published by Alyson Publications, will be available in bookstores in early November.

Read me a story, Daddy."

Oh, I think I can manage that ... just take your pick. In between these covers you will be able to find just about any kind of daddy your heart desires. There's a biological father whose gay son shows him that there's more to sex than procreation; a leather daddy who gets flipped by a cross-dressing femme; a slightly older gay man who lets the personals lead him into hard-dicked daddyhood; a submissive daddy who gives it up for his beautiful drag-queen daughter; dyke daddies who are both nurturing and mean; a daddy who has to get some help to convince his head-tripping boy to give it up for real; a vicious real-life daddy whose memory fuels a dominatrix's authority; a clerically collared father; a bondage-and-sensory-deprivation daddy; a daddy whose libido is big enough for him to take on a brother for his boy; a straight stepfather who diapers his wife; a pimp daddy who makes sure his stripper-boy puts his tips to good use as college tuition; and more.

Pat Califia, author of Melting Point, Macho Sluts, Doc and Fluff and other works, has edited Doing It for Daddy, a funny, arousing and scary collection of risk-taking work about role-playing in the S/M community (and elsewhere), the debate over mainstreaming the gay and lesbian communities, incest, child abuse and censorship.

OUT THERE

by Aiva Midnacs
and Polly Popular

November is a time for retreating indoors. Animals hibernate. Straight people plan family reunions. And the crowds on the Cafe balcony head indoors for the cozy warmth of the bar stool. Most of all, November means party season. Even shy sissies like Aiva go wobbly at the thought of all those holiday soiree invitations being bulk-mailed as we write these words. For clean and sober Polly, November is a time for smaller, quieter gatherings - with lots of gossip.

Tie Me Up, Tie Me Down: Lesbian and gay Saskatchewan will be partying hard this year, now that they don't have to worry about artistic freedom anymore. The Saskatchewan Film Classification Board recently banned the quasi-SM comedy Exit To Eden, thereby shielding local residents from the unpleasant spectacle of Rosie O'Donnell's career going down the toilet. Evidently, Exit To Eden violates regulations that bar depictions of "physical abuse or humiliation of human beings as a means of sexual gratification or as pleasing to the victim." Presumably this means Saskatchewan queers can look forward to not having to endure the second Roseanne TV movie, or any further Danielle Steele mini-series.

Green and Peasant Land: The members of Britain's Gay Sweatshop sound like they really need a party. G.S. recently announced their Fall production, Fucking Martin, based on Dale Peck's ridiculously gloomy novel Martin and John. The play's title didn't go down too well with Birmingham politicians who labeled the gung-ho group "appalling" and "outrageous." In the end, Fucking Martin went ahead but with 'Censored' stickers over the title. Gay Sweatshop's artistic director, James Neale-Kennerly, was philosophical: "Are there no grown-ups left in the world? 'Fucking' is a word we hear in our everyday lives. Why does everyone find it so shocking?" James, it could be worse. You could be performing in Saskatchewan.

Trick Photography: You won't see any 'Censored' stickers on the walls at Red Dora's Bearded Lady Cafe this month. But the Cafe's current exhibition of lesbian nudes by British-based photographer Della Grace had to be camouflaged as an innocuous still-life poster exhibit in order to get through Canadian customs on its way to SF last year. Gracing the alternate wall at Red Dora's are Jessica Miller's multimedia works addressing a range of issues including childhood, sexual abuse and Jewish identity.

Here's A Duet We'd Like To See: Two of our favorite musicians recently explained the meaning of modern romance. Here's Barry White in Entertainment Weekly: "Love is a transparent emotion. Whether it's gay or straight, I don't give a fuck. If the two of you want it to be beautiful, soft as an easy chair, elusive as a beautiful dove or butterfly, then it can be." And here's Michael Stipe on MTV: "I just don't think it's anyone's business what I do with my dick, unless they're sitting in my lap."

But Can We Dance At The Reception?: Eavesdropping on a recent discussion of lesbian and gay weddings at A Different Light Bookstore, our queer romantic hopes were dashed when we turned to the bookshelf to find out what super-elloquent, free-love advocate Emma Goldman had to say on the subject: "Love, the strongest and deepest element in all life, the harbinger of hope, of joy, of ecstasy; love, the defier of all laws, of all conventions; love, the freest, the most powerful moulder of human destiny; how can such an all-compelling force be synonymous with that poor little State and Church-begotten weed, marriage?"

And For Dessert, We'll Date Lulu: We were talking of parties, though, and we need to set the record, er, straight. A few weeks back we mentioned plans for a swanky fundraiser at Elka's, featuring Go Fish gals Rose Troche and Guinevere Turner. Now it turns out that Elka's ex (as in ex-sous chef, of course), a v. talented culinary star herself, is co-hosting the party at Rubicon, where she is Executive Chef. The event takes place November 20, and costs $50. Rumor is, all the restaurant-scene lesbians will be there. For more info, call (415) 703-8665.

Local Talent: The Roxie Cinema's upcoming lesbian shorts program, "Reel San Francisco Lesbians!" hits the screen on Election Night, November 8th at 7 and 9 p.m. (don't forget to vote No on 187). Some of SF's hottest dyke filmmakers will be in attendance including local actor/director Desi del Valle. You can also catch study del Valle in her genderfuck role as a troubled teenage boy in Jon Moritsugu's long-awaited Mod Fuck Explosion, playing in this year's Film Arts Festival November 2nd-6th at the Roxie Cinema.

Queer New Wave On A Roll: Todd Haynes' Safe is being readied in time for a New Year premiere. Safe's producer Christine Vachon will eventually make I Shot Andy Warhol: The Valerie Solanis Story, starring Short Cuts' Lili Taylor (rumored to be playing a lesbian role in Robert Altman's upcoming Pret-a-Porter). Who'll play Andy Warhol? Aiva's betting it will be Boy George, but Polly thinks the part should go to Robin Williams because he's shorter and he looks better in a white wig. May we come to the wrap party?

Vachon's Warhol project has recently been pushed back as she pounces into pre-production on the BBC-funded Stonewall, a mainstream drama about queer history's most famous street party, based on the Martin Duberman book. It was previously dubbed The Night That Judy Garland Died, and will be filmed by Lost Language Of Cranes' director Nigel Finch (no relation to one of Out There's favorite Bay Area bachelors, Mark Finch of the Lesbian & Gay Film Festival).

Finally, it's not too late to enter Out There's exciting year-end competition. We want your gossipy nominations for The Most Boring Homosexual In The World. Send us your votes, with your name and address and daytime telephone, and we'll publish the winners - anonymously! Write to Aiva and Polly's Boring Competition c/o B.A.R., 395 9th St. San Francisco, Ca. 94103. Saskatchewan film censors, British politicians and Canadian customs officials are not eligible. ▼

Film Arts Festival '94 Highs and Lows

by Paul Bollwinkel

The dozen or so gay and lesbian works featured in the 10th annual Film Arts Festival offer a surprisingly similar take on the state of homosexual America in the mid '90s. Despite differences in subject matter, the films and videos, all shorts, are — with one strong exception — dark, heavy, introspective explorations that look at gender discrimination, lost love, AIDS angst, body image and the complications inherent in any kind of sexual interaction.

In Tomboy, video director Dawn Logsdon uses stills and childhood reenactment to illustrate her case against rigid gender identification while adult women, in voice-over, describe the pain they felt growing up butch in a girly world.

Forced to play with dolls and tea sets while craving the physicality and freedom allowed boys, these tomboys spell out a litany of woes that will sound all too familiar to most gay audiences. It's not until the end that the women talk about self-acceptance and the liberation found in coming out. (Tomboy plays in the program "The Life You're Taught May Not Be Your Own" Nov. 5 at the Roxie Cinema, 7 p.m.)

Personal takes

The male take on sex-role indoctrination is examined in The Smell of Burning Ants, Jay Rosenblatt's visually inventive study of "the pain and trauma of growing up male." Through clever editing of old educational films, Rosenblatt, using a narrator who reminds us that "boys are told not to cry," depicts boyhood as a time of blind allegiance to macho behavior.

The title refers to a recurring visual theme — the torture of small creatures (frogs, bunnies, kittens, insects) by insensitive boys. This ugliness allows Rosenblatt to incorporate some startling images, yet the overall tone is relentlessly downbeat. (The Smell of Burning Ants plays in the program "The Life You're Taught May Not Be Your Own," Nov. 5 at the Roxie Cinema, 7 p.m.)

Without Saying Goodbye, by videomaker Tanya Jo

Miller, is an extremely personal "scrapbook" look at the horror of relationships and the obsessive search for love. Using stills and voice-over, the narrator takes us through a break-up, with all its preoccupying analysis. Near the end, Miller lightens the mood by finding humor in her addiction to romance. Just when you want to scream, "get a life!" she does. (Without Saying Goodbye plays in the program "Scenes of Uncertain Action" Friday, Nov. 4 at the Roxie Cinema, 9:30 p.m.)

Rising is an exercise in form over content. The film seems to be about a dysfunctional, silent family. But with only six lines of dialogue and a confusing, though often arresting, visual style, it's hard to know exactly what director Daven Gee is after. The daughter suffers from an eating disorder. The son may be gay. Dad's in a bathrobe and neck brace and Mom leans against a wall, moping and smoking. No one talks. The film's obscure narrative may be a metaphor for liberation. (Rising plays in the program "The Life You're Taught May Not Be Your Own," Nov. 5 at the Roxie Cinema, 7 p.m.)

To the point

Skin-es-the-si-a is a striking and original feminist work that seems to be imitating the arty/empty style of a Calvin Klein commercial. A narrator lists female body parts in emphatically poetic cadences while a woman — in full gynecological detail — dances in a peep show. The same woman is then seen as a performance artist — posing, stretching, baring it all in front of a live audience. Juxtaposing the two women, video director Vicky Furant makes her points about pornography, performance and sexuality in an admirably unpretentious style. (Skin-es-the-si-a plays in the program "Articulate Flesh" Thursday, Nov. 3 at the Roxie Cinema, 9:15 p.m.)

In Talking About the Weather a young man on his way to a Washington, D.C. political march is waiting at a train stop when another guy walks by and shifts into heavy cruise mode. He sits down and the two begin to talk. The cruise-er has just returned from learning that he is HIV positive and needs someone to talk to. Director Carl Forest Sandler's modest, well-acted, 11-minute slice of life nicely turns sexual cruising into a fleeting moment of compassion and friendship. (Talking About the Weather plays in the program "Scenes of Uncertain Action" at the Roxie Cinema, Friday Nov. 4 at 9 p.m.)

'Alright Mama' — best of the fest

The best of the bunch is That's Alright Mama, an too-brief documentary look at two Smith College-educated lesbians who drive big rigs. They take turns sleeping, driving, and hassling sexist truck stop owners. At 14 minutes, this video seems more a demo for a feature film than a complete work, but what sets it apart from other FAF offerings is its upbeat attitude.

While most of the queer-tinged films in this festival seem unduly somber, the protagonists in That's Alright Mama, Beth and Kim, crab at each other, complain about incompetent mechanics and become so tired that they go from giddy to slap-happy. They're inspiring. (That's Alright Mama plays in the program "Americas" at the Roxie Cinema, 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, November 2.)

Other titles of interest to gay and lesbian viewers include Malady of Death, Tom's Flesh, Mad About the Boy, Final Solutions, Virus, and Out in Comedy. ▼

The Film Arts Festival runs November 1-13 at the Roxie Cinema, Center for the Arts, U.C. Theatre in Berkeley and at Camera 3 Cinemas in San Jose. The festival opens with a special screening at the Castro Theatre of We Love You Like a Rock, Ashley James' documentary about legendary Gospel singers, the Dixie Hummingbirds, who are flying in to perform live for the opening night festivities. INTERVIEW

In the decade-and-a-bit since, O'Hara's penis has propelled him into a stellar career in porn—five movies a year for five years—and on to an unassailable pinnacle of power. As publisher and editor of Steam magazine, O'Hara's cock has made him an arbiter and guardian of public morality. Along the way, O'Hara's tool has provided inspiration not only to porn makers and pudpullers, but to artists of all persuasions. It is this role as muse to the artists that is currently being celebrated in an exhibition sponsored by Mark I. Chester and Steam magazine.

Opening November 11th, and on view through December 10, the exhibit includes work by 14 artists from all over the United States, in artistic explorations that range from portraits and classical nudes to sensationally frank hard-on dick imagery. Among those featured are well-known West Coast artists Don Bachardy and Rick Castro, local artists including photographer Howard Rothman, recently profiled in the B.A.R.; painter David Ross, who created legendary murals for the Liberty Baths and whose current "sex/art" adorns Blow Buddies; S/M iconographers Chester and Michael Rosen; and onstage photographer Howard Coleman.

The exhibit, a tribute to the body of work inspired by O'Hara's cock, provides this writer the occasion to question the way gay men, like Eloi to Morlock, so casually surrender their thoughts, their souls, their very bodies, to the Man—any man—with the Massive Member? Why should the possession of a big dick make one a spokesman? Because we allow it.

■ ■

Born 32 years ago in Grants Pass, Oregon, Scott's earliest gay involvement was with the Radical Faeries who gathered at the nearby encampment now called Wolf Creek. But the budding adolescent O'Hara bypassed their rich, gay philosophies for their more easily proffered blowjobs.

"One of the things involved (in Faerie life) is a very communal attitude," O'Hara told me during a recent phone interview from his hide-away in far off Cazenovia, Wisconsin. "I don't personally live well with that approach to life. And I don't make decisions by consensus well. I'm a dictator by nature."

Although he was a budding performer in high school, O'Hara eschewed subsequent training at the University of Dallas. "I ended up dropping out before my first year was over," he revealed, "because it taught me that I wasn't a good actor. And I didn't like the whole idea of college.

"I had nothing else in mind," O'Hara said, "and I just ended up drifting for the next three years."

It was a period of sexual adventure ("Lots of it," O'Hara enthused lasciviously), during which he lived in numerous cities and was most often employed in bathhouses. He didn't become a professional sexual performer until he joined the staff at Savages, although he admits, "Having frequented bathhouses around the country, I had done a lot of exposure of myself."

After seeing several shows at Savages, a performer recognized him as a front row regular, and suggested he do a show himself.

"So they turned off the movie for me, and afterwards the manager asked if I wanted to work there. So I became a performer. And loved it."

"The manager wanted to make a porn flick, and asked me, and I said, 'Sure, why not.' I was just having a ball, all over the place."

But with a little more intellect than most performers, plus the good grace to be faintly embarrassed by his Big Dick title, the breezy O'Hara understood the importance of artistic goals in his new profession.

"I tried very hard not to be what I call a 'big dick person,'" he explained. "Savages was fun, but once I started to be in videos, I wanted to make something worthwhile of them, make a difference. And I think I did. I enjoyed myself. An important attribute of making those movies is that you show you enjoy what you're doing."

Such blithe ambition was fated, however, when O'Hara was blackballed by the industry after becoming one of the first porn stars to insist on employing safe-sex provisions while filming. The presence of lesions on his body also curtailed his stage career.

This experience was as politicizing to the performer as his choice of political ideology had been years earlier. When asked, in a high school civics class what political party he belonged to, he refused to answer democrat

Danny Scheie's All-Male 'Twelfth Night' Something Queer in Illyria

Danny Scheie

by Jerry Metzker

During the summer months, the Bay Area becomes one big giant Shakespeare Festival. Hence, it's surprising that Theatre Rhinoceros, which rarely presents works of the Bard, has included a production of Twelfth Night in its Fall season. Even more surprising is that Shakespeare Santa Cruz Artistic Director Danny Scheie has decided to direct, which means this Twelfth Night is going to be one of those not-to-be-missed theater experiences.

Scheie (pronounced Shay) is not unknown to Bay Area theater aficionados. But if he's less than a household name in the gay/lesbian community, that's about to change. Fresh from a successful summer season at Shakespeare Santa Cruz, where he presented lavender-tinged productions of The Merchant of Venice and The Merry Wives of Windsor, Scheie will bring his own exquisite sensibility to what is perhaps Shakespeare's most gay-sensitive play, Twelfth Night.

Twelfth Night is also one of Shakespeare's most accessible plays. Duke Orsino of Illyria has set his sights for marriage on Olivia, a countess who has sworn off men. Young Viola is shipwrecked in Illyria and assumes the disguise of a boy servant in order to win the Duke's favor. Her primary task is to win the heart of Olivia for Orsino, but instead, Olivia falls for Viola. To further complicate matters, Viola's twin brother Sebastian also survived the shipwreck, and when he makes his appearance, the already frustrated Viola is thrown into further turmoil.

"In Twelfth Night," Scheie explains, "I think Shakespeare is playing around with the fluidity of gender as it carries over into the fluidity of desire. First you have Orsino saying he's in love with Olivia, this completely unavailable woman. Also, Orsino seems to be surrounded by young men. Then we have this girl, Viola, dressed up like a boy, and she — or he — never goes out of drag, even at the end of the play. So Orsino has essentially fallen in love with, proposed to, and all but married someone who in many ways is a boy. That's certainly homoerotic if not homosexual."

If this sounds like the familiar academic deconstruction of sex in Shakespeare, it should, for Scheie's Ph.D. dissertation at U.C. Berkeley was on sexuality in Shakespeare's comedies. Granted, this is familiar territory, but Scheie's approach is more than academic. His ideas on Shakespeare, and Twelfth Night in particular, reveal a dedicated passion to interpreting characters through an actor's perspective.

relationship with Orsino. By staying in Illyria, he puts himself in grave danger, but the character reiterates not just his devotion but also his love for Sebastian over and over again. "And Shakespeare was not a sloppy playwright that way," Scheie explains. "If he wanted Antonio just to be Sebastian's pal, why doesn't he have Antonio say that? I mean, Shakespeare was not at a shortage for words."

"As an actor," Scheie explains, "you need to find concrete reasons for your character doing something. Of course, every time gay actors come up with these character traits and discuss them as valid parts of their portrayals, we get the argument that we're not following the 'Renaissance ideals.'"

Queering the Bard

Wearing the mantle of director, Scheie jettisons straight assumptions about Shakespeare's plays and examines what he calls the plays' original gay sensibility. "One of the arguments that I come up against all the time is that Elizabethans didn't have the concept of homosexuality we have today, but we know, as gay men and lesbians, that there were people with same-sex desire before us. But this has been kind of erased. It's been silenced, like a lot of histories."

And for Scheie, burnishing the queer core in Shakespeare's plays is a way of reclaiming gay history. "A lot of our history has been erased. Where one does find it is in art and literature, like in Shakespeare's sonnets, although high school teachers have been doing back flips trying to get rid of it for years. With Shakespeare, we've had four hundred years of heterosexual scholarship that has tried to silence the gay sensibility, the gay characters, and the gay voice in Shakespeare."

But not for much longer, at least around here. Blessed with the opportunity to direct at Rhino, Scheie is looking forward to Twelfth Night as a liberating experience. For the first time he is directing an all-male cast, which is exactly the way Shakespeare wanted it. And, aside from a few minor cuts, he's not changing a single word. "It's queer, sexy, funny, and painless," says Scheie, "in the Shakespearean sense. It's also homo-homo-homo because it's all men. I am truly excited to be directing at Theatre Rhinoceros." ▼

Danny Scheie directs Shakespeare's Twelfth Night at Theatre Rhinoceros, Nov. 3-Dec. 3. Call 861-5079 for tickets and information.

Actor's Instinct

For much of his theater career, Scheie has been an actor, and it is not difficult to see why. He is attractive and energetic, sensible and sensitive, and extremely charming. While a student at U.C. Berkeley, he played a number of leads and acquired his Equity card after a long run of Moliere's Tartuffe at the Los Angeles Theatre Center. In fact, his first experience with Shakespeare Santa Cruz was when he was cast as Rosencrantz in both Hamlet and Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead in 1985.

He started directing there in 1988.

This season he played Mistress Quickly in The Merry Wives of Windsor, and it is his actor's instincts that initially pulled him into Twelfth Night. "I think the one thing that Twelfth Night does have is the most openly gay man in Shakespeare's canon," he says, "Antonio, who saves Sebastian's life and falls in love with him."

Antonio is a seaman, but he never explains his occupation, and he is just as ambiguous about his not-so-friendly rela-or republican like the others, and responded, "libertarian."

"I don't think I knew at that point what it meant," he said. "But I remember being looked at, and enjoying it."

The creation of Steam, like his political affiliation and most everything else in O'Hara's life, was accidental. As the author of an occasional piece, O'Hara drifted into full-time writing when a friend suggested O'Hara publish the magazine as a chronicle of his international sexual experiences. His goals for it remain characteristically breezy: "To open people's minds up to sex, to give men more freedom in enjoying themselves sexually. That's it in a nutshell, I think. To try to change the way society views sex."

Lofty aims these, but Steam hasn't always been more than just waving the stick around. Here's Scott's ultimate platform:

BAR: In one of the articles about you, it says, "O'Hara pushes buttons, and works it for the greatest possible effect." Now, you might be somewhat embarrassed to be identified as the person with the biggest dick, but you've certainly shaken it around in public, because you know you can get a reaction. So the question is, What is the effect you are working for? Or, are you just reacting to the ability to get an effect?

O'Hara: I seldom have a specific goal in mind. I do it because the audience enjoys it, and I enjoy giving a good show.

BAR: In other words, it seems as if the effect came before the cause.

O'Hara: Well, I knew the audience would enjoy it.

BAR: But then you've always tied the effect of waving your dick around to a societal goal, which included enjoying sex, and sexual freedoms, all that stuff you said Steam magazine worked for.

O'Hara: Well, there's no question the realization that it could work that way came after I was already enjoying it.

BAR: So Steam magazine is a little bit like waving your dick around?

O'Hara: Yeah.

So, I ask you: Is this the man who should be leading us, a man whose basic credential is a big dick?

Answer: Yes. Because you must trust a dick. There is truth in its response. So celebrate the depiction in art of O'Hara's big dick. And respond to his words, as published in Steam. But always be on the alert. Remember: you're a size queen. ▼

The Scott O'Hara exhibit is at 1229 Folsom Street, Saturday and Sunday, 1-6 p.m., November 11 through 20, then by appointment through December 10. Information and appointments: (415) 621-6294.

Doing It for Daddy is a twisty, fast ride on the roller coaster of polymorphous perverse, gender-fucking, role-playing fantasex. Bet you'll try to get off more than once. Sometimes when you least expect it. Perhaps you'd better strap yourself down, just as a safety precaution. Oh, and don't make any assumptions about the "real" sex or sexual orientation of any of the authors of these stories. Just grab the lube, let your libido stop apologizing, and loosen up that elbow.

Aw, jeez. Did a book like this really have to hit print right now? I mean, Judith Reisman is on CNN reading excerpts from Macho Sluts, and the New Christian Right is picking libraries that carry Heather Has Two Mommies, and Canadian Customs is so paranoid about buggery in print they're confiscating Hot, Hotter, Hottest, a cookbook about the tantric joys of jalapeno peppers. Aren't we playing right into their hands? Can't we just ... lay low about this stuff for a while?

I don't think so. There's just no way to placate the anti-sex fanatics. For heaven's sake, these people went ballistic over Daddy's Roommate. You can't get much more wholesome than that. Much as I want the affirmative, gay-positive children's books in the Alyson Wonderland series to be available, I don't think we can protect them by not writing about adult sexuality in all its baffling diversity. The homophobes do not stop hating us when we go mainstream. Even if every single gay man and lesbian in America was in a long-term, monogamous, committed relationship; had eighteen children; never read anything racier than the Bible Digest and Pork Belly Futures Quarterly; voted Republican; and was enlisted in the army, they would still want to push us into the ocean. The politics of appeasement simply doesn't work. Books like this one in fact make the rest of gay literature safer because they push the edges and enlarge the territory of what can be said, thought about, and done.

Granted, this is a bad time to be a father figure. The benevolent, all-knowing patresfamilias of the 1950s have been replaced by brutal, uncaring monsters who batter their wives and sexually abuse their children. Leave It to Beaver has been reduced to ashes by The Burning Bed. The word "daddy" in the title of a television program or movie used to be associated with comedy or a heart-warming morality tale. Now it has an ominous ring. The porno viewer is notified that he or she is about to witness terrible, shocking things (which have sadly lost their power to surprise or shock anybody because of media overexposure). The word "father" has become virtually synonymous with "sex offender."

It was time to end decades of silence about domestic violence, of course, but the public discourse on incest and spousal abuse has reached a moronic level. Feminist analysis has suffered a similar dumbing-down.

Pat Califia, photographed by Phyllis Christopher.

Yes, we live in a male-dominated society. But when gender is the only cause we can identify for assaults on a mate or child, we have in fact explained very little. Certainly no way out of the jungle of family-based mayhem has been cleared. If sexism is the primary cause of these ills, why do some men refrain from terrorizing their mates or offspring? And why do some women batter their husbands and maim, even kill, their own children?

If we can believe the evening news and the daily papers, the only alternative to dime-store feminism seems to be dime-store psychology. Only crazy people do these things. Domestic violence is an expression of mental illness. But if we believe these horrific acts are the work of isolated, damaged people suffering from a rare mental disorder, we cannot account for the fact that domestic violence is pandemic. This psychodynamic explanation also obviates the possibility of critiquing the structure of the patriarchal family, much less changing it.

Uncovering the sources of human destructiveness is beyond the scope of this introduction or this book. But the topic has to be broached, because it will be used to justify banning this book. Isn't Doing It for Daddy romanticizing incest? How can anybody find this material arousing when real incest is so traumatic, damaging its victims psychologically for life?

Though it pains me to state the obvious, I will do so for the record. This book does not advocate incest. It does not advocate child abuse. It is not about rationalizing or justifying nonconsenting sex between adults and minors. It is about sexual fantasies and erotic games played between consenting adults. Why do these scenarios make some of us hard or wet or both? Are they just toxic waste from growing up in the heterosexual nuclear family? Or do they represent our attempt to acknowledge the hidden eroticism that binds family members together?

As adults, I think we sometimes need to retreat to a semblance of childhood to fill in the blanks and receive some of the unconditional love and sexual validation we never received when we were literally dependent upon our parents. As horrible as child abuse is, even more children are damaged by their parents' ignorance or panic about sex. Most parents still punish or shame their children for masturbating or asking questions about their own anatomy or human reproduction. Even heterosexual adolescents usually don't get support for making good choices about when to become sexually active or how to protect themselves from conception or sexually transmitted diseases. Getting any advice about proper sexual technique is out of the question. No wonder losing your virginity is usually a traumatic and awkward anticlimax.

All of us come to adulthood with deficits and wounds from these histories of repression. Daddy/boy and daddy/girl fantasies are about unfinished business; about integrating the vulnerable child-self with the adult ego and libido; and about receiving what we truly need from our partners and caretakers.

Most of us grew up with distant, harassed, overworked, temperamental fathers who did not know how to cry, ask for help, physically show affection, or express their love for us out loud. Mothers are usually capable of the appearance of more intimacy, and they tend to verbalize more affection. But mother love always comes with strings attached: be good, don't embarrass me, take my side against your father, accept my goals for you. We all subconsciously knew this apparent dichotomy between lovey-dovey mom and cold, distant, dangerous dad couldn't be the whole story. If Dad was such a bastard, why did Mom stay with him? What was the secret of his power, his attractiveness? If he didn't love us, why did he keep disappearing every day to do a job that was so exhausting and demanding? For most of us, becoming an adult (whether we are male or female) means choosing dad instead of mom, the world instead of the home, action and ambition over attachment and intimacy.

Or maybe dad wasn't there. Maybe we grew up in a single-parent household, with a mother who had to work for a living as well as try to raise us. Ironically, the child of a fatherless family may have an even more intense relationship with Daddy than

by Dianne Aaronson

Designing a personalized exercise program is a real challenge, even for professionals working in the exercise field. But for neophytes it's even more difficult. Without exposure to the most current information, these individuals are left to figure things out for themselves. And when it comes to understanding cardiovascular (aerobic) needs, the potential for confusion is high.

Now, what is cardiovascular exercise? In order to be considered truly aerobic, an activity must be a repetitive movement that causes the body to reach and maintain a heart rate of 60 to 85 percent of the target heart range for a period of 20 minutes or more. Sedentary folks might want to start at the 60 percent range, while individuals not new to aerobic fitness should start no lower than 70 percent of target heart range.

Computing target heart range

The tried and true formula for computing target heart range is "220 minus age." In other words, a 40-year-old person would subtract their age from 220, ending up with 180 as the maximum heart range. Thus, target heart range would be 60 to 85 percent of 180. This is a quick and easy way to figure target heart ranges when you're in an aerobics class or at the gym. However, this particular formula is really just shorthand for finding your range and is not all that accurate. The problem is that some people have faster pulses than others ("normal" resting heart rates range from 60 beats per minute to 80 bpm). Hence, a more complicated formula was devised by exercise professionals that takes an individual's resting heart rate into account.

Karvonen formula:

First you must find your resting pulse by placing your second and third fingers on the inside of your wrist (thumb side) and pressing down. If you can't feel your pulse, have a friend help you. Watch the second hand of your watch as you count your pulse beats. The number of pulse beats you count within 60 seconds is your resting pulse. (Note: when you begin counting, start off with zero, then one, two...) Now you're ready for the calculation. For purposes of illustration, let's suppose you are 40 years old with a resting heart rate of 60. It would look like this:

-age	-40
=predicted h.r.	=180
- resting pulse	- 60
=total	=120
x desired intensity	x 60% (or 70%)
=total	=72
+ resting pulse	+ 60
=60% target heart range	=132 beats per minute

If you are engaged in aerobic activity and are unable to take your pulse, an alternative measurement is something called "perceived exertion." Your breathing should be fairly labored, but you should have enough breath to carry on a light conversation or sing. This will help ensure that you are working within the proper training zone.

Reasons to do aerobic exercise

Now that you've mastered that lengthy calculation, you're probably wondering what's the point, right? Consider the following: Aerobic exercise burns fat for fuel, increases your metabolic rate (so you burn more calories even when you're sitting around reading), increases the level of endorphins (the "feel good" chemical) in your body, reduces blood pressure, decreases your resting heart rate, improves blood cholesterol levels, lowers incidence of coronary heart disease, and gives you more energy.

Aerobic activities

For those of you who hate aerobic classes and thought it was your only choice for a work-out program, guess again! You can probably find some other form of exercise that is fun - and right - for you and doesn't require wearing spandex warm-ups.

Cross-country skiing is considered one of the best aerobic activities, mostly because it utilizes both upper - and lower - body muscles, and is high-intensity yet low impact. The well-known Nordic Track simulates this activity and is considered quite a workout. Rowing also utilizes both the upper and lower body. If you have the opportunity to actually join a rowing team, do it. It's lots of fun. If not, find a rowing machine.

Swimming is another low-impact, full-body aerobic activity. However, for those people primarily interested in burning fat, this is not the way to go. Fat is needed as an insulator in the water, so it tends to stay put.

Jogging and running are great ways to increase your heart rate, but both are high-impact activities and can cause, over time, wear and tear on your joints. An alternative is a treadmill, which helps absorb some of the shock.

Cycling, either indoors on a stationary bike or outdoors on a real bike, is a great way to burn calories. It's also low impact, since your feet never touch the ground. Walking is also considered an excellent aerobic activity. It's lower impact than running or jogging, but the benefits are the same. However, the time you spend walking will have to be approximately twice what you would spend running to burn the same amount of calories. It's an excellent choice for people who are just starting or returning to exercise.

Frequency, intensity and duration

Those three little words are the cornerstone of your aerobic program. How much energy (i.e., calories) you expend is determined by how often you do the activity, how hard you work (target heart range), and how long you do it. If you are new to aerobics, don't worry about trying to last 20 minutes. Perhaps five minutes will be all you can do at first. Increase the duration, a minute at a time, till you feel strong enough to last 20 or more minutes. Eventually, a range of 20 to 60 minutes is desirable. As stated earlier, beginners should stay at the 60 percent range while veterans can move up to the 70 to 85 percent target heart range. How often you exercise is up to you, but three to five times a week is the rule of thumb for maintaining cardiovascular health. ▼

BOWLING

Best three leagues of six

How often do you get more than three chances to bowl three good games? Well, the Bud Light Golden Gate Classic and Scratch Masters Tournament will provide that opportunity to bowlers who sign up for the upcoming "league play tournament," to be held November 6-18. This "Best Three Out of Six" series is a league play singles tournament. Individuals bowl as they would on any other league night, submitting scores from this two-week period. Each player's worst three scores are thrown out and the best three scores are combined to give players their tournament scores. The fee is $10. Registration closes on November 6. Call Don George at 255-9401.

Challenging bowlers in Sacramento and San Jose

San Francisco will challenge the Sacramento and San Jose bowling communities in a Tri-

Cities Challenge Tournament on December 10 at Japantown Bowl. San Francisco has some of the best competitive gay bowlers in the country, so the question is, Can Sacramento and San Jose make the grade? This one-day event will be a four-person team tournament challenge with an optional doubles element. Squads run at 11:30 a.m. and 2 p.m. For more information and an entry form, call 738-1729. ▼

Leather & Feather winners at the Eagle last Friday, Oct. 28: The Stonewall Girls (Best Group), surround the Voodoo Priest (Best In Theme) and the Pink Flamenco (Most Humorous).

More Tricks Than Treats

Halloween in San Francisco is always mind-boggling. While the official date is Oct. 31, there are always those who "just can't wait" to show off their creativity. So, as early as last Wednesday, revelers converged on The Stud for a big celebration. The place was decked out festively and was completely jammed. There was lots of schmoozing, boozing and cruising. Always a good party at The Stud.

By Thursday, costumed people were everywhere. Even MUNI drivers were in on the act. On Friday, the SF Eagle's annual Leather and Feather Halloween costume party was overflowing as hedonists jammed the patio to gawk at the creativity of their brothers and sisters. Gays eschewed the compulsion to wear O.J. Simpson masks and/or other "trendy" regalia. No, all of the costumes were original, and most were very clever.

Mark Ziegler flew in from Seattle to help the Phoenix Uniform club's Warren Cave and Drummer magazine editor Marcus Wonacott judge the costumes. There were some very creative entries, including Marvin the Martian, a voodoo priest, a wedding cake ornament from "hell," a leather unicorn (with a huge horn!), a leather bird of paradise, and three men from the Ausland, just to name a few.

After the festive audience gave their input (by applause), the judges did their picking: Harold the voodoo priest won for best "in theme" costume; Miguel Gutierrez as the Pink Flamenco was chosen as the most humorous; and The Stonewall Girls got best group. Their drag outfits (eight of them) were color-coded like hankies indicating one's sexual proclivities.

A lot of gay people were seen on the late night news with the cleverest of costumes at the Exotic Erotic Ball on Saturday night and, of course, by Sunday, everyone was bursting to show their stuff, including the Black Out party at the Motorwerks. It was amusing to watch a Palestinian type dude trying to put the make on a rather petite Pee Wee Herman type right in front of Sharon Viola's station at the Eagle! Too bad there wasn't a porno theatre nearby.

On Monday, the Sisters of Perpetual Indulgence were on the early morning TV newscasts promoting the madness that night on Castro, like they really need to publicize a guaranteed crowd of almost 250,000 people hell-bent on having a good time. I hope you had a good time!

And speaking of seasonal parties, if you're planning to be in England at the end of December, you might want to join thousands of blokes for the BIG NYEB '94 in London. It means New Year's Eve Ball and only 12,000 tickets will be sold for the extravaganza being coordinated by organizer Franciscus van Remmen. He hopes it will be similar to Sydney's Mardi Gras or Melbourne's Slezee Ball. You can get info by phone or fax at 081 740 0921, or write to NYEB '94, 12a Mansell Road, London W37QH.

Also, the FFofA (Florida Gold Coast chapter) is planning a big weekend plunging bash beginning Friday, Dec. 30 at the Club Caribbean Resort in Fort Lauderdale. You can get more info by writing to FFA-FGC, P.O. Box 500, Fort Lauderdale, FL 33302, or call (305) 761-3961.

The new Mr. American Leatherman, Victor Magide, will visit SF at the end of the month. A cocktail/reception is being planned and anyone who's anybody in the leather community is invited to come and meet this hot man. Watch your mail box!

Dot, Dot, Dot Dish

You'll be glad to know that the slithery little queen who has ripped off leathersmen in San Francisco, Phoenix and Denver has been spotted in Seattle leather bars; warrants have been issued here and in Denver and it shouldn't be long before the culprit gets netted. What nerve!

More good news: some members of the board of directors of the AIDS Emergency Fund who made no bones about being anti-leather, and who gave the dedicated Rick Salinas so much static, have not been invited to be on the board – they are o-u-t! More irrational nerve!

So that you will not be lulled into believing that "dish" is all negative, did any of you notice former IML Lenny Broberg sweating his butt off last Sunday at the AIDS Benefits Counselors' beerbust at the Eagle? There he was, cooking tons of hamburgers for the crowd. He didn't get onstage once!

Lenny knows what being a leather title-holder is all about. He proved it with his tireless enthusiasm this year as IML, and will continue to do so behind the scenes. A lot of other sash-rashers do the same, but others can only criticize and make false accusations. Too bad. Too, too bad.

The holiday season is just around the corner, which means partying, raising money and buying gifts. A lot of great calendars are out there for nominal fees, including Bear Magazine's 1995 Bearmen, which is really hot and includes everyone's favorite daddy on the cover – Mack McQuade! And what about the Great Buns Calendar and the new Colt Calendars? Mouth watering, indeed.

Almost all of our Bare Chest Calendar guys will be off to San Diego on Saturday, Dec. 3 to sign, sell and promote the 10th Anniversary edition at the new San Diego Eagle. What with San Diego's Bob Toner (Mr. November) promoting this fundraiser, a man without a title, it's a shining example of leadership, something a few people with titles we all know could/should learn a lot about. ▼

"But when they got there (costume shop), the cupboard was bare" – so these two hot dudes celebrated without Halloween accoutrements.

one who doesn't have to rely on fantasy and guesswork to create a symbolic sire. We love (hate) our daddies, yes we do, even when we don't have a clue who the old man was. How could all this rich, potentially explosive material escape being eroticized? Why is it more valid to pay a shrink $200 an hour to lead you through the minefield when you can put your lover in a three-piece suit for a lot less money and get several orgasms as well as a suitcase full of insight? I believe sexual ennui is often the result of locking our lips when our hearts and crotches are telling us to say something forbidden, whether that's "Hurt me" or "You bitch" or "Fuck me harder, Daddy!"

I suspect this is because we cannot function as whole and healthy human beings without the masculine virtues. I am not saying that masculinity should be the exclusive province of biological males or that females should be relegated to feminine mannerisms and occupations. But I am dubious about the prescription of androgyny as a solution for inequality between the sexes or a recipe for sexual gratification. Men and women are different. Those differences are controversial and difficult to quantify, but that does not mean they are trivial. Masculinity is a valuable part of our human heritage, part of the reason we survived and flourished as a species. We have reached a stage of material well-being and leisure, with a level of medical technology and social-science sophistication that gives us the luxury of contemplating our nature and changing it. The second-place, limited role allocated to women is being expanded and women are being empowered at a breathtaking clip. But the demonization of men has been an ugly counterpart to the liberation of women. Is there nothing in masculinity that we should salvage?

I suggest that violence and oppression are the evidence of failed masculinity; of insecurity, not domination or victory. The essence of masculinity is the choice to be gentle even when one is stronger than others; to care for one's dependents and nurture the young; to devise rites of passage and train our charges to pass through them successfully; to help those who are in trouble; to work hard and perform well; to provide food even in a time of scarcity; to deal with problems or emergencies in a courageous and effective manner; to mount a defense and, if necessary, get hurt or even die in the process of protecting the people who are depending upon and helping you.

As the state abrogates the right to protect private property and jobs that require big muscles grow scarce, masculinity is being connected more and more to sexual responsibility. A sexual encounter, whether it's between two men, two women, or a man and a woman, is rarely a simple matter of a powerful aggressor swooping down upon a piece of cute, but helpless prey. There's a dance involved in which two different types of power engage, repel, and eventually entwine with one another. The initiator may look more powerful, but in a consensual encounter, the one who is pursued has their own ability to control what is happening. The simple power to reject a suitor is not inconsiderable. Nor is the power to draw attention, to create sexual interest and arousal, and to promise fulfillment. But somebody has to wander over and say, "Do you come here often?" before anything can happen. Masculinity is the spark plug of sexuality, and this may be the key to its survival, even in a world of complete gender equality. Masculinity will always be part of the territory of human desire and intimacy. ▼

SPORTS

San Francisco Women's Football League—October 30

by Maureen Hogan

This week's scores were close as the SF Women's Football League moved one week closer to the season's playoff games. The first game pitted the Girlfriends against the Posse. The Girlfriend's quarterback Maureen Benet connected twice with both Kim Green and Deb Meyer, and once with Marla Mundis. Pippa Fleming kept the Posse in the game with two break-away runs, but the Girlfriends took the game, 32-12.

The second game matched the Cafe against the Rebels. Jackie Thompson and Maria Ramiu both received touchdown passes from Cafe quarterback Maureen Hogan. Rebels quarterback Laura Carpenter scored on a quarterback sneak and connected with Michelle Brodie for a second touchdown. The Rebels failed on the conversion and the Cafe won 14-12.

Game three found Fear This battling Yikes! in what was the closest game of the day. Fear

This quarterback Olga Guittierez found Kim Reynolds, who took it 55 yards to the end zone. Yikes! quarterback Cheryl Christy ran it in from 15 yards out to score, but Yikes! came up short on the extra point, and Fear This won the game by one point. Final score: 7-6.

The Avengers and Warriors held the fourth game spot. Avengers quarterback Ray Ann Thompson found Pat Sielski; and Jen Coughlin scored off a pass from quarterback Carla Campbell. Warriors quarterback Kerri McGillicuddy kept them in the game with a quarterback sneak from 25 yards out, but the Avengers held on to the lead for a 12-6 win.

The last game of the day was between Fear This and Team SF. Fear This' Vicki Martin ran it in twice. Sue Berry of Team SF recovered a fumbled interception and ran it in for the touchdown. But it wasn't enough and Fear This came up with its second win of the day, 14-8. ▼

Roger of SF
A short, solidly-build, clean-cut & handsome topmen into gradual physical S&M, bondage, and sensual, creative stimulation.
Do not confuse with brutality — not into marks, fluid exchange, or crude caricatures of masculinity. Most people look for pleasure in the same old places ... If you're looking for a dominant, level-headed and experienced top to guide you into new sensual territory, call an expert.
